Allies Collide With Jap Resistance in Far East

U.S. Marines Beat Down Jap Attacks

New Guinea Advance Runs Into Japanese Opposition on Ground Only

Praises U. S. Aim

Knox Says Japanese Casualties Are Greater Than American

Washington, Nov. 7 (AP)—American and Allied advances in the Solomons and New Guinea battlefronts had crashed headon into suddenly stiffened Japanese resistance today with enemy troops paying heavily for unsuccessful efforts to regain lost ground.

Lodged between two Nipponese forces awaiting a chance to spring on the American-held airbase in Guadalcanal, U. S. Marines and soldiers beat off several strong enemy assaults from the west, the Navy reported last night.

The Americans clung to their land gains obtained in an offensive that was started last Sunday, the Navy said, and repulsed the counter-attacks west of Matanikau river with "heavy losses to the enemy."

East of the airfield near Koli Point where the foe twice succeeded in landing reinforcements for a Japanese concentration in the last few days, the battle lines remained unchanged. Further attacks, however, were expected hourly.

The Japanese attempts to stall the Army-Marine offensive in Guadalcanal occurred the night of November 4-5, the Navy said, and drew withering fire not only from U. S. ground forces but from American planes as well.

The aircraft strafed enemy troops and installations continuously, the communique said. No Japanese aerial opposition was mentioned and apparently the American planes retained control of the air.

The Allied advance in New Guinea to the west of the Solomons also collided with Japanese ground troops and presumably a fierce battle was raging about 50 miles south of the enemy's coastal base at Buna.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Australian command announced today (South Pacific Time) that the Allied troops which have pushed the Japanese back more than half way across the island from their drive on the Port Moresby base, had encountered resistance near Oivi.

Allied bombers for the third successive day raided enemy-occupied towns in Portuguese Timor, northwest of Australia, dropping explosives on barracks and supply installations and starting several fires.

Japanese casualties in the three-months old Solomons campaign were estimated by Secretary of Navy Knox at more than four or five times as great as the American losses.

Knox told a press conference yesterday that this ration was continuing and he attributed it to superior American marksmanship. He cautioned, however, against

Nurse Is Indicted

Mrs. Batchelder, 23, Has Bail Set at $5,000 in Kidnap Case

New York, November 7 (AP) — Mrs. Katherine Batchelder, 23, former nursemaid of four-year-old Nancy Joyce of Pelham, was indicted by a federal grand jury yesterday for extortion.

Mrs. Batchelder is charged with having sent a note to Nancy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Goodloe Joyce, Jr., last September demanding $30,000 for the return of the child who supposedly was kidnaped.

Federal agents said she admitted taking Nancy to a room in New Rochelle and mailing the extortion note, purporting to show that she and the child were being held prisoners by kidnapers.

On the same day, according to the F.B.I., she lost her nerve and surrendered the child.

The former nurse is held in $5,000 bail and will be arraigned on the indictment Monday, the U. S. Attorney's office said.

Role of Schools Is Called 'Essential'

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 7 (AP).—Schools form "an essential industry, ranking with the armed forces and production" because of their contribution to morale, an educator informed the New York State Association of Deans today.

"At a time like this, no institution has a right to exist except as it contributes its facilities to the utmost toward winning the war," W. H. Pillsbury, Schenectady superintendent of schools, declared in a prepared address.

"The most important factor, according to our leaders, for a maximum war effort, is morale. This job must depend primarily upon the schools. * * * Morale is composed of many factors, but the most essential is understanding."

Carl Eric Lindin Dies at Woodstock

Well-Known Artist Was Member of County Rationing Board

Carl Eric Lindin died early this morning at his home in Woodstock, after a short illness. He was born in Sweden, June 15, 1869, and came to America in 1887, but later returned to Europe and studied art in Paris under Laurens, Constant and Aman-Jean. Returning to Chicago, he became prominent in art circles and in Hull House activities there. He married Miss Louise Hastings of Chicago in Hull House in 1911. In 1902, Mr. Lindin was associated with Ralph Radliffe Whithead, Bolton Brown and Hervey White in the founding of the Woodstock art colony at Byrdcliffe, and made his home at this time in the disused Lutheran Church building, which he and his wife later remodeled into a beautiful residence.

Mr. Lindin was a portrait and landscape painter of unusual distinction. He was represented by 10 pictures in the Chicago Art Institute Exhibition of 1897, won notable awards in 1919 and 1925-28 from the Swedish Club, Chicago, and was chosen to decorate Hull House. His work is represented in Brooks Memorial Art Gallery, Memphis, Tenn., the John H. Vanderpool Art Association, Chicago, and in many private collections. He was President of the Woodstock Art Association, a Trustee of the Woodstock Public School for many years, Director of the Woodstock Country Club, and a zealous and unselfish worker in community affairs. He was in daily attendance as a member of the Ulster County Rationing Board, at the time he was taken seriously ill.

Mr. Lindin is survived by his wife, Mrs. Louise Hastings Lindin; one son, Gregory Eric Lindin of Bard College, Annandale; and a daughter, Mrs. Karen Lindin Whiteley of Woodstock; a grandson, Bruce Whiteley of Woodstock; also his mother, Mrs. Carolina Lindin, and several brothers and sisters, all in Sweden.

Funeral services will be held at his home in Woodstock Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Archbishop William Henry Francis of St. Dunstan's Chapel of Woodstock, assisted by the Rev. Harvey I. Todd of Woodstock.

Burial will be in Woodstock Memorial Society Burying Ground.

U.S. Workers Know Today Their Wages Are Really Frozen

Increases to Be Granted in 'Exceptional' Cases Only, W.L.B. Says in Statement

BY KENNETH L. DIXON

Washington, Nov. 7 (AP)—Realization that an "Early Freeze" had stunted growth of their pay envelopes last Sept. 15 dawned on the nation's workers today as they were confronted with the strict terms of a new wage-salary stabilization order issued by the war labor board.

Empowered by President Roosevelt's October 3 economic stabilization order, the WLB virtually froze most wages and salaries under $5,000-a-year at the mid-September levels, and Chairman William H. Davis served notice it would be "Pretty Damn Tough" to break the ice.

Adopted unanimously by the public, labor and industry members of the board, the order affected all non-agricultural wages and salaries paid $5,000, except salaries paid supervisory or professional employes. Farm wages come under the Agriculture Department's jurisdiction and the treasury controls other salaries.

"Only in exceptional cases" are increases to be granted over the listed levels, the order stated, adding that no raises whatsoever are to be approved unless "necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate sub-standards of living, to correct gross inequalities to aid in the effective procecution of the war."

While no specific policy for considering requests for a raise has yet been set up, the board said it generally would follow the principal set up in the "Little Steel" case which permitted a 15 per cent wage boost to meet cost-of living increases since January 1, 1941, levels.

However, the W.L.B. stressed that when raises since that date have totalled 15 per cent, no more need be sought.

Exception Are Noted

The board said that this policy was "not applicable to individual workers or to employes in parti-

U. S. Surgeons Are Shown New Key-Hole Camera; Takes Color Photos of Stomach

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 7 (AP)—United States military surgeons were shown a new key-hole camera which takes color pictures of the inside of the human stomach.

This camera looks down a tube into the stomach, through an opening no bigger than a key-hole. The camera itself is an inch thick, inch-and-a-half wide and two-and-a-half inches long. It has an eye piece which fits directly over the stomach tube opening, in the position ordinarily used by the doctor's eye.

The camera was exhibited yesterday at the association of military surgeons' convention.

Photos of stomach interiors have been made before, with cameras which are smaller. But the key-hole camera takes a larger picture, clear and life-size in colors, and color is the main information wanted by physicians in diagnosing stomach troubles.

The human stomach is extraordinarily brilliant in colors, the shades being reds, yellows, browns and occasional whites. These colors show gastritis, most common of all stomach troubles, and distinguishes between the several different types of gastritis. The colors also are important in diagnosing cancer, stomach ulcer and other serious ailments.

The camera was built to take its pictures through the Schindler gastroscope, the instrument widely used by American doctors to peer inside human stomachs. The gastroscope looks like a very slender riding whip, with but little taper until near its point. Gastroscopes are developments of the sword swallower's art, started many years ago by a German military surgeon.

The tube is flexible, has a tiny electric light in its stomach tip, and 51 lenses to transmit the scene back through the curves of the flexible rod.

The problem of taking a color photograph with a camera at the eyepiece end has been fuzziness

At the Kingston Hospital where McGlynn was brought, his condition was reported as serious.

Local 17 Delegate Is Held on Charge Of Pocketing Fees

Misappropriation of $170 Is Cited; Tripp Pleads Not Guilty; Is Free on $2,500 Bond

Wendell E. Tripp, 39, of Walden, a labor delegate and an alleged henchman of Samuel Nuzzo, ousted business agent of Local 17, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, was arrested Thursday afternoon on a charge of pocketing union dues and initiation fees for his own use.

Tripp was named in a sealed indictment filed last week with Justice Riley H. Heath, by the extraordinary grand jury investigating the union's financial affairs. He was indicted for second degree grand larceny in connection with the misappropriation of $170.50 during November and December, 1941.

Arraigned later before Justice Heath, Tripp pleaded not guilty and was committed to the Orange county jail pending the posting of a $2,500 bail bond, and was later released when he posted the amount of the bail in cash.

Henry Hirschberg, former district attorney of Orange county, who resigned to defend Nuzzo, also is representing Tripp.

Mr. Hirschberg, defense counsel for Nuzzo, who faces trial in Orange county on December 1, indicated Thursday when he moved to have the trial set over until January, that he will attempt to prove that the treasury of the union was depleted of funds spent protecting the rights of laborers working on the New York city aqueduct project.

The former district attorney told Justice Heath in Newburgh Thursday that the union spent huge sums of money to hire men to protect its members during a jurisdictional dispute with a New York city sandhogs' union a few years ago.

He was given a one-year suspended sentence and fined $5,000. The company was fined $10,000. He retired in 1936, 45 years after he joined the company as an office boy.

Red Anniversary Brings World to Due Appreciation

Original Russian Revolt Was Grim, Desolate Affair, but Its Effect Is Seen

(This column, conducted as a daily feature by DeWitt Mackenzie, is written today by Glenn Babb. Mr. Mackenzie, now touring the war zones, is traveling.)

The Russian people celebrate today the quarter-century anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution, an event which history may show to have left a more lasting imprint than any other of recent times. To a considerable portion of humanity it is the mightiest occurrence not merely of these times but of all time.

Anniversaries invite comparisons. Last night Joseph Stalin compared Russia's war situation of a generation ago with that of today to show how, at the moment, the Russian armies face the most formidable foe they have known. No exception can be taken to the grim realism of the picture drawn by the Soviet leader.

But the differences between the Russian situation of today and that of 1917, or rather between the character of the Russian nation of 1942 and that of 1917, form one of the brightest features, perhaps the most heartening of all, in the prospects of the United Nations.

The generation which is doing most of the fighting in this war is too young to remember the feeling of doom that settled over the Allies of that other war when the Bolshevists took over. Although President Roosevelt, Anthony Eden and other leaders of the United Nations join today in felicitating the Soviet Union and especially in extolling the heroism of the Russian army and people, the October revolution (so called because it came on October 25 of the old Julian calendar) was anything but a cause for rejoicing in 1917.

The original Russian revolution then was nearly eight months old. The weakness and incapacity of the first revolutionaries, following upon the evils and misfortunes of the Czarist regime, had brought Russia to a tragic plight. The Bolshevists rapidly gathered power. Trotsky organized the party's military strength under the noses of the regime to be overthrown. Lenin emerged to sound the call for the new order. On November 7 the military revolutionary committee of the Petrograd (now Leningrad) Soviet seized power and the next day turned it over to the all-Russian congress of Soviets.

'Land, Bread, Peace'

"Land, bread, peace" was the new slogan. A few months later came the peace the Allies had dreaded, the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, signed March 3, 1918, which opened the Ukraine and Caucasus to the Germans and gave the world a foretaste of what

Two-Thirds Of 140,000 Out of War

Armored Columns Are More Than 104 Miles Beyond Point of Beginning

Divisions Give Up

Six Italo Divisions Surrender Without Resistance

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Britain's victorious Egyptian armies were reported to have captured or trapped 100,000 German and Italian troops today, crushed a desperate Axis attempt to rally and swept 100 miles across the desert nearly halfway to the Libyan frontier.

More than two-thirds of the total Axis forces of 140,000 troops were said to have been eliminated from the battle, with the British in swift pursuit of the broken enemy.

A British communique said 20,000 Axis troops had already been captured, along with 350 tanks and 400 guns. Six Italian divisions were reported cut off, without food or water, meekly waiting to surrender.

The crack Italian Trieste and Bologna divisions were reported among the beleaguered Fascists waiting to be picked up when the British could get around to them.

"The advance of the eighth army continues," British headquarters announced.

Latest dispatches said British armored columns had now reached beyond Matruh, 104 miles west of the old El Alamein battlefront and nearly halfway to the Libyan frontier.

While British reports pictured the Germans as retreating west of Matruh, Nazi field headquarters asserted that the battle was continuing with "great fierceness" east of the coastal town.

The Italian command devoted only one brief paragraph to the struggle.

"The fight continued yesterday in the region east of Matruh. Violent Axis counterattacks caused heavy losses to enemy armored columns."

Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery's field headquarters said British troops were mopping up "abondoned Italian divisions," left behind by the fleeing German panzers, in the southern sector of the battle area.

Six Italian divisions, totalling perhaps 80,000 troops, were reported left in the lurch by their Nazi comrades, with their communications cut and facing annihilation or surrender.

"Remnants of the panzer army attempted to hold our advance on the Fuka escarpment," the British command announced, "but after vigorous attacks by our armored forces they were driven further west."

Meanwhile, speculation arose on the possibility of an Allied seaborne thrust to block the escape of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's battered forces.

The German radio reported that a large Allied convoy from Gibraltar was steaming through the Mediterranean on a mysterious mission, and Axis circles conjectured that they might be sailing for some point in Africa—perhaps

Ring Tells Story

Testimony Found in Shark Stomach by Fishermen Off Cuba Coast

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 7 (AP)—A letter telling of a ring found in the stomach of a shark caught off the coast of Cuba has been filed in the Norfolk Circuit court as mute testimony to the death of Captain George Dewey Hodges, whose ship was torpedoed and sunk north of Cuba last July.

The letter reporting discovery of the ring by shark fishermen was sent to the agents of Hodges' ship at Havana, who sent a copy to his wife's attorney here.

The outside of the large signet ring bore the initials "G. D. H.", the letter said, and on the inside was engraved "E. R. G. '17". Mrs. Hodges, the former Edna Randolph Green, said she gave such a ring to Hodges in 1917.

Hodges and 19 others were lost in the sinking of the ship. Fourteen were saved.

Farm wages come under the Agriculture Department's jurisdiction and the treasury controls other salaries.

"Only in exceptional cases" are increases to be granted over the listed levels, the order stated, adding that no raises whatsoever are to be approved unless "necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities, to eliminate sub-standards of living, to correct gross inequalities to aid in the effective procecution of the war."

While no specific policy for considering requests for a raise has yet been set up, the board said it generally would follow the principal set up in the "Little Steel" case which permitted a 15 per cent wage boost to meet cost-of living increases since January 1, 1941, levels.

However, the W.L.B. stressed that when raises since that date have totalled 15 per cent, no more need be sought.

Man Is Injured At West Park

Patrick McGlynn, 60, Is Brought to Kingston Hospital Today

Patrick McGlynn, about 60, home unknown was seriously injured early this morning near the Hi Hat Tavern at West Park when he apparently walked into the side of a car which was being driven south on its way to Stewart Airfield where the occupants were employed. At the Kingston Hospital where McGlynn was brought, his condition was reported as serious.

Deputy Sheriff George Reynolds made an investigation of the accident and learned from the occupants of the car that the aged man had apparently left the tavern and started across the road. He ran into the side of the car, his body striking the right side of the car and apparently his head went through the front right window of the vehicle.

The car was owned by James W. Shader of 24 Abeel street but was driven by Henry Peck of 21 Ann

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 7 (AP)—United States military surgeons were shown a new key-hole camera which takes color pictures of the inside of the human stomach.

This camera looks down a tube into the stomach, through an opening no bigger than a key-hole. The camera itself is an inch thick, inch-and-a-half wide and two-and-a-half inches long. It has an eye piece which fits directly over the stomach tube opening, in the position ordinarily used by the doctor's eye.

The camera was exhibited yesterday at the association of military surgeons' convention.

Photos of stomach interiors have been made before, with cameras which are smaller. But the key-hole camera takes a larger picture, clear and life-size in colors, and color is the main information wanted by physicians in diagnosing stomach troubles.

The human stomach is extraordinarily brilliant in colors, the shades being reds, yellows, browns and occasional whites. These colors show gastritis, most common of all stomach troubles, and distinguishes between the several different types of gastritis. The colors also are important in diagnosing cancer, stomach ulcer and other serious ailments.

The camera was built to take its pictures through the Schindler gastroscope, the instrument widely used by American doctors to peer inside human stomachs. The gastroscope looks like a very slender riding whip, with but little taper until near its point. Gastroscopes are developments of the sword swallower's art, started many years ago by a German military surgeon.

The tube is flexible, has a tiny electric light in its stomach tip, and 51 lenses to transmit the scene back through the curves of the flexible rod.

The problem of taking a color photograph with a camera at the eyepiece end has been fuzziness

Local 17 Delegate Is Held on Charge Of Pocketing Fees

Misappropriation of $170 Is Cited; Tripp Pleads Not Guilty; Is Free on $2,500 Bond

Wendell E. Tripp, 39, of Walden, a labor delegate and an alleged henchman of Samuel Nuzzo, ousted business agent of Local 17, International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union, was arrested Thursday afternoon on a charge of pocketing union dues and initiation fees for his own use.

Tripp was named in a sealed indictment filed last week with Justice Riley H. Heath, by the extraordinary grand jury investigating the union's financial affairs. He was indicted for second degree grand larceny in connection with the misappropriation of $170.50 during November and December, 1941.

Arraigned later before Justice Heath, Tripp pleaded not guilty and was committed to the Orange county jail pending the posting of a $2,500 bail bond, and was later released when he posted the amount of the bail in cash.

Henry Hirschberg, former district attorney of Orange county, who resigned to defend Nuzzo, also is representing Tripp.

Mr. Hirschberg, defense counsel for Nuzzo, who faces trial in Orange county on December 1, indicated Thursday when he moved to have the trial set over until January, that he will attempt to prove that the treasury of the union was depleted of funds spent protecting the rights of laborers working on the New York city aqueduct project.

The former district attorney told Justice Heath in Newburgh Thursday that the union spent huge sums of money to hire men to protect its members during a jurisdictional dispute with a New York city sandhogs' union a few years ago.

Red Anniversary Brings World to Due Appreciation

Original Russian Revolt Was Grim, Desolate Affair, but Its Effect Is Seen

(This column, conducted as a daily feature by DeWitt Mackenzie, is written today by Glenn Babb. Mr. Mackenzie, now touring the war zones, is travelling.)

The Russian people celebrate today the quarter-century anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution, an event which history may show to have left a more lasting imprint than any other of recent times. To a considerable portion of humanity it is the mightiest occurrence not merely of these times but of all time.

Anniversaries invite comparisons. Last night Joseph Stalin compared Russia's war situation of a generation ago with that of today to show how, at the moment, the Russian armies face the most formidable foe they have known. No exception can be taken to the grim realism of the picture drawn by the Soviet leader.

But the differences between the Russian situation of today and that of 1917, or rather between the character of the Russian nation of 1942 and that of 1917, form one of the brightest features, perhaps the most heartening of all, in the prospects of the United Nations.

The generation which is doing most of the fighting in this war is too young to remember the feeling of doom that settled over the Allies of that other war when the Bolshevists took over. Although President Roosevelt, Anthony Eden and other leaders of the United Nations join today in felicitating the Soviet Union and especially in extolling the heroism of the Russian army and people, the October revolution (so called because it came on October 25 of the old Julian calendar) was anything but a cause for rejoicing in 1917.

The original Russian revolution then was nearly eight months old. The weakness and incapacity of the first revolutionaries, following upon the evils and misfortunes of the Czarist regime, had brought Russia to a tragic plight. The Bolshevists rapidly gathered power. Trotsky organized the party's military strength under the noses of the regime to be overthrown. Lenin emerged to sound the call for the new order. On November 7 the military revolutionary committee of the Petrograd (now Leningrad) Soviet seized power and the next day turned it over to the all-Russian congress of Soviets.

'Land, Bread, Peace'

"Land, bread, peace" was the new slogan. A few months later came the peace the Allies had dreaded, the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, signed March 3, 1918, which opened the Ukraine and Caucasus to the Germans and gave the world a foretaste of what

Two-Thirds Of 140,000 Out of War

Armored Columns Are More Than 104 Miles Beyond Point of Beginning

Divisions Give Up

Six Italo Divisions Surrender Without Resistance

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Britain's victorious Egyptian armies were reported to have captured or trapped 100,000 German and Italian troops today, crushed a desperate Axis attempt to rally and swept 100 miles across the desert nearly halfway to the Libyan frontier.

More than two-thirds of the total Axis forces of 140,000 troops were said to have been eliminated from the battle, with the British in swift pursuit of the broken enemy.

A British communique said 20,000 Axis troops had already been captured, along with 350 tanks and 400 guns. Six Italian divisions were reported cut off, without food or water, meekly waiting to surrender.

The crack Italian Trieste and Bologna divisions were reported among the beleaguered Fascists waiting to be picked up when the British could get around to them.

"The advance of the eighth army continues," British headquarters announced.

Latest dispatches said British armored columns had now reached beyond Matruh, 104 miles west of the old El Alamein battlefront and nearly halfway to the Libyan frontier.

While British reports pictured the Germans as retreating west of Matruh, Nazi field headquarters asserted that the battle was continuing with "great fierceness" east of the coastal town.

The Italian command devoted only one brief paragraph to the struggle.

"The fight continued yesterday in the region east of Matruh. Violent Axis counterattacks caused heavy losses to enemy armored columns."

Lieut. Gen. B. L. Montgomery's field headquarters said British troops were mopping up "abondoned Italian divisions," left behind by the fleeing German panzers, in the southern sector of the battle area.

Six Italian divisions, totalling perhaps 80,000 troops, were reported left in the lurch by their Nazi comrades, with their communications cut and facing annihilation or surrender.

"Remnants of the panzer army attempted to hold our advance on the Fuka escarpment," the British command announced, "but after vigorous attacks by our armored forces they were driven further west."

Meanwhile, speculation arose on the possibility of an Allied seaborne thrust to block the escape of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's battered forces.

The German radio reported that a large Allied convoy from Gibraltar was steaming through the Mediterranean on a mysterious mission, and Axis circles conjectured that they might be sailing for some point in Africa—perhaps

Ring Tells Story

Testimony Found in Shark Stomach by Fishermen Off Cuba Coast

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 7 (AP)—A letter telling of a ring found in the stomach of a shark caught off the coast of Cuba has been filed in the Norfolk Circuit court as mute testimony to the death of Captain George Dewey Hodges, whose ship was torpedoed and sunk north of Cuba last July.

The letter reporting discovery of the ring by shark fishermen was sent to the agents of Hodges' ship at Havana, who sent a copy to his wife's attorney here.

The outside of the large signet ring bore the initials "G. D. H.", the letter said, and on the inside was engraved "E. R. G. '17". Mrs. Hodges, the former Edna Randolph Green, said she gave such a ring to Hodges in 1917.

Hodges and 19 others were lost in the sinking of the ship. Fourteen were saved.

Axis Fears Fleet Might Presage Second Front

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Axis and neutral reports that a mighty Allied fleet has put out from Gibraltar on a mysterious expedition into the Mediterranean were capped today by an open German expression of fear that the United Nations were setting the stage for a second front in Europe.

All Allied sources have been silent on these reports which began in the past week with a dispatch from La Linea, Spain, that 125 war vessels and other ships had assembled at Gibraltar and pyramided today into these developments.

1. A broadcast by the Nazi-controlled radio at Hilversum, that "there is no doubt in Berlin that the British aim is to capture north African ports in order to set up a second front from there."

The first inhabitants of North America came from Siberia, via Bering Strait.

New Independent Union Formed at Rosendale

The question of Union representation among the employes of the A. J. Snyder Lime Co. and the Century Cement Co., Rosendale, took a new turn Thursday night, when at a meeting held at Hill's Hotel, Rosendale, a new independent union was organized.

William A. Kaercher, who was attorney for the former independent union, which following a N. L. R. B. hearing was characterized as "company dominated," and which has been disbanded, was present at the meeting Thursday night and advised the employes regarding organization procedure.

An A. F. L. union, the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers' International, at the N. L. R. B. hearing in September last, claimed to represent a majority of the workers in the plant, charged that the companies refused to bargain collectively with them and that the "Independent Lime and Cement Workers of Rosendale" was a company sponsored and dominated union.

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Selected stocks continued to reach for higher levels in today's market with bullishness again attributed mainly to the apparent Axis debacle in Egypt.

As in the previous session, stocks that might benefit from an earlier than expected peace were well in front of the advance. The lagging rails of Friday steadied but failed to get anywhere in particular.

Gains of fractions ruled at the start and these generally were maintained near the final hour. Dealings, fast for a while, slowed later.

Bonds were mixed and commodities narrow.

Among shares getting into new high ground for the year or longer were International Telephone, General Motors, Chrysler, J. I. Case, and Sears Roebuck. Supported were U. S. BRITISH GENERAL VIEWS BATTLE

Lt. Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British Eighth army, watches the advance of his troops in the Egyptian desert from the turret of his American-built tank. The Allied forces were reported pursuing the retreating Axis troops along the coastal road toward Libya. (Picture by radio from Cairo).

100,000 Axis Troops Are Taken

to make a landing on the Libyan coast.

Without confirmation from any United Nations source, Axis reports said 125 British warships and other craft, including the battleship Rodney, had been massing in Gibraltar harbor for the past week.

Axis quarters declared Gibraltar was being made the springboard for a new United Nations offensive "somewhere" and predicted the war soon would spread to French territory in Africa, with Allied landings in French Morocco or at Dakar.

Frontline dispatches said the disordered mass of Rommel's army, in headlong flight along the Mediterranean coast, was offering little resistance and was not even in fighting formation.

Planes Strafe Enemy

Wave after wave of low-flying American, British and Allied planes were reported strafing and bombing the enemy "west of Matruh," churning their ranks to prevent any attempt to regroup.

While German troops piled into available trucks and raced for the Libyan border, the Italians were stranded in the desert for lack of transportation. The British said "many thousands of vehicles" were captured as the Nazis fled.

Countering Axis claims that Rommel's forces were out-numbered, British quarters in Cairo said the Allies nad only 10 divisions in the immediate battle area against 12 Axis divisions. Moreover, Rommel had four armored divisions against three British armored divisions.

In other key theatres of the war, the news continued to be good:

Russia—Soviet headquarters reported that the Red armies drove the Germans from two fortified positions in the 75-day-old siege of Stalingrad and held firmly from the Arctic to the deep Caucasus against Nazi attempts to crack the defense lines.

About 1,000 Germans were killed yesterday in the Stalingrad area alone, dispatches said.

Italy Bombed — Britain's far-ranging bombers flew 1,300 miles round-trip across the Alps last night to pound anew at the Italian war foundries of Genoa.

First reports said the attack was concentrated and highly successful.

Genoa is a major base for the shipment of supplies to Rommel's armies in North Africa.

Solomon Islands—U. S. Army troops and marines were officially credited with beating off a series of strong Japanese attacks on Guadalcanal, frustrating enemy attempts to recapture ground won by American offensive thrusts.

A navy communique said the defenders repulsed Japanese counter-attacks west of the Matanikau river with "heavy losses to the enemy."

The navy indicated that American planes based on the island still retained control of the air, continuously strafing Japanese troops and installations.

Navy Secretary Frank Knox said Japanese casualties in the three-months-old Solomons campaign were more than four or five times as great as American losses.

New Guinea—Gen. Douglas Mac Arthur's headquarters reported that Allied troops driving back across the 120-mile-wide Papua peninsula had met suddenly stiffened Japanese resistance, and a fierce battle was raging 50 miles south of the enemy's coastal base at Buna.

Burma—U. S. Army bombers, flying from bases in India, renewed their attacks on Japanese docks and ships at Rangoon, Burma, and returned without loss.

Hot Seat Middle East

World Wide Features

As military action speeds in the middle east, the position of Turkey, between the Caucasus and Syria, becomes more precarious. Our enemy in World War I, Turkey has been praised by Secretary Hull for "correctly" conducting her foreign affairs today.

Since World War I, Turkey's 18,000,000 people have modernized, westernized. Becoming a republic in 1923, Turkey under Kemel Ataturk and present President Ismet Inonu, has discarded fez and veils; abolished slavery; adopted the 24-hour clock and Georgian calendar; established Sunday as the day of rest instead of Friday, the Mohammedans' Sabbath.

Turkey has rich natural resources of chrome ore, zinc, manganese, antimony, copper—resources needed by the Allies. She lacks industry, now gets war equipment from the U. S.

Her conscripted army in 1940 was estimated at 500,000, with a potential of 2,000,000; navy, 4,800; air force, 8,500 men with about 370 first-line craft. As war has drawn closer, the Turks have built secretly.

Allies Collide With Japanese

conclusions that "this is a finished fight."

The Japanese warships which withdrew from the Solomons battle area late last week, still remained a threat to the American hold on Guadalcanal's airbase and the secretary asserted that "we thoroughly expect and confidently expect that they will come back." Meanwhile, he added, both the American and enemy fleets have more time to strengthen their forces for the next sea battle.

Magistrate Francis X. Giaccone ordered Mallon held without bail for action by the Queens grand jury after his attorney, William E. Kennedy, said that Mallon wished to waive examination.

Pawling, N. Y., Nov. 7 (AP) — Three hundred neighbors of governor-elect Thomas E. Dewey welcomed him back to his farm home in this Dutchess county village last night on his first visit since he led the Republican sweep of New York in Tuesday's balloting. When Dewey stepped from the train he found the station platform trimmed with bunting and flying the stars and stripes. At his own request, the home-coming ceremony was simple and brief. Supervisor Egbert T. Green, spokesman for the villagers extended greetings and mentioned that Dewey had polled a larger plurality than "any other candidate in the history of the village."

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Blue Book of Social Usage," etc.)

DON'T AIR YOUR FAMILY TROUBLES

Turning a family friend into a judge by making him listen to family disputes is discussed in this reader's letter: "I wish you'd write a few words to those who are prone to air their domestic troubles to the complete discomfort of an innocent third person. There are certain old friends who get hurt if I don't go to see them, yet everytime I go something turns up to make me wish I'd never gone in the first place.

It's a mother and daughter situation, the mother living with the married daughter. At times they are both right and at times both wrong, but I don't want to take sides no matter how I feel; and never do. But I don't like to be a witness to their differences. Other friends have remarked this same thing. Maybe if you would say something about the bad manners of forcing their guests at tea to feel that they are members of a jury, perhaps it would do some good to know what others think of this habit. Perhaps it might cure them?

As to this last I think it doubtful. Habits are not often cured even by being told about them directly—let alone so indirectly as by a "piece in the paper." But it is of course true, that there is no surer way of making our friends avoid us, than by forcing them to listen to family disputes.

A Suitable Gift

Dear Mrs. Post: I'd like to give a Christmas present to the family of a girl friend, who invited me several times to stay with them last summer. They loved picnics with cooking out-of-doors and we went on one every time I was there. I've thought perhaps a set of picnic dishes, or something along that line which they could put to good use would be appropriate. But then I got to wondering if, since they hadn't any special picnic appointments, could they feel that I thought they should have had?

Answer: A Christmas present by all means, and it seems to me that nothing could be more suitable than something useful for a picnic. To give them what they already have would be senseless and I certainly think they would be lacking in ordinary common sense if they objected to your giving them something needful as well as useful. In other words, I see no problem in this question.

Children's Clothes at a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Post: What shall my two daughters aged nine and seven wear at my son's wedding. They will sit with me in the front pew and are they supposed to go up the aisle with me? Is a baby—aged two—ever taken to a wedding?

Answer: They should wear exactly what they would wear to a party with the addition of hats and special attention paid to the becomingness of these. A baby of two is often taken to a family wedding.

Twenty oft-repeated questions about special problems of table service and setting are answered in Mrs. Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Table Setting," which you may have by sending ten cents in coin and a three-cent stamp to cover postage and handling. Address Mrs. Post, care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Axis Fears Fleet Might Presage Second Front

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Axis and neutral reports that a mighty Allied fleet has put out from Gibraltar on a mysterious expedition into the Mediterranean were capped today by an open German expression of fear that the United Nations were setting the stage for a second front in Europe.

All Allied sources have been silent on these reports which began in the past week with a dispatch from La Linea, Spain, that 125 war vessels and other ships had assembled at Gibraltar and pyramided today into these developments.

1. A broadcast by the Nazi-controlled radio at Hilversum, that "there is no doubt in Berlin that the British aim is to capture north African ports in order to set up a second front from there."

New Independent Union Formed at Rosendale

The question of Union representation among the employes of the A. J. Snyder Lime Co. and the Century Cement Co., Rosendale, took a new turn Thursday night, when at a meeting held at Hill's Hotel, Rosendale, a new independent union was organized.

William A. Kaercher, who was attorney for the former independent union, which following a N. L. R. B. hearing was characterized as "company dominated," and which has been disbanded, was present at the meeting Thursday night and advised the employes regarding organization procedure.

An A. F. L. union, the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers' International, at the N. L. R. B. hearing in September last, claimed to represent a majority of the workers in the plant, charged that the companies refused to bargain collectively with them and that the "Independent Lime and Cement Workers of Rosendale" was a company sponsored and dominated union.

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Selected stocks continued to reach for higher levels in today's market with bullishness again attributed mainly to the apparent Axis debacle in Egypt.

As in the previous session, stocks that might benefit from an earlier than expected peace were well in front of the advance. The lagging rails of Friday steadied but failed to get anywhere in particular.

Gains of fractions ruled at the start and these generally were maintained near the final hour. Dealings, fast for a while, slowed later.

Bonds were mixed and commodities narrow.

Among shares getting into new high ground for the year or longer were International Telephone, General Motors, Chrysler, J. I. Case, and Sears Roebuck. Supported were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Texas Co., Standard Oil (N. J.), Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Westinghouse, American Can, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Goodrich, Consolidated Edison, and North American.

100,000 Axis Troops Are Taken

to make a landing on the Libyan coast.

Without confirmation from any United Nations source, Axis reports said 125 British warships and other craft, including the battleship Rodney, had been massing in Gibraltar harbor for the past week.

Axis quarters declared Gibraltar was being made the springboard for a new United Nations offensive "somewhere" and predicted the war soon would spread to French territory in Africa, with Allied landings in French Morocco or at Dakar.

Frontline dispatches said the disordered mass of Rommel's army, in headlong flight along the Mediterranean coast, was offering little resistance and was not even in fighting formation.

Planes Strafe Enemy

Wave after wave of low-flying American, British and Allied planes were reported strafing and bombing the enemy "west of Matruh," churning their ranks to prevent any attempt to regroup.

While German troops piled into available trucks and raced for the Libyan border, the Italians were stranded in the desert for lack of transportation. The British said "many thousands of vehicles" were captured as the Nazis fled.

Countering Axis claims that Rommel's forces were outnumbered, British quarters in Cairo said the Allies had only 10 divisions in the immediate battle area against 12 Axis divisions. Moreover, Rommel had four armored divisions against three British armored divisions.

In other key theatres of the war, the news continued to be good:

Russia—Soviet headquarters reported that the Red armies drove the Germans from two fortified positions in the 75-day-old siege of Stalingrad and held firmly from the Arctic to the deep Caucasus against Nazi attempts to crack the defense lines.

About 1,000 Germans were killed yesterday in the Stalingrad area alone, dispatches said.

Italy Bombed — Britain's far-ranging bombers flew 1,300 miles round-trip across the Alps last night to pound anew at the Italian war foundries of Genoa.

First reports said the attack was concentrated and highly successful.

Genoa is a major base for the shipment of supplies to Rommel's armies in North Africa.

Solomon Islands—U. S. Army troops and marines were officially credited with beating off a series of strong Japanese attacks on Guadalcanal, frustrating enemy attempts to recapture ground won by American offensive thrusts.

A navy communique said the defenders repulsed Japanese counter-attacks west of the Matanikau river with "heavy losses to the enemy."

The navy indicated that American planes based on the island still retained control of the air, continuously strafing Japanese troops and installations.

Navy Secretary Frank Knox said Japanese casualties in the three-months-old Solomons campaign were more than four or five times as great as American losses.

New Guinea—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that Allied troops driving back across the 120-mile-wide Papua peninsula had met suddenly stiffened Japanese resistance, and a fierce battle was raging 50 miles south of the enemy's coastal base at Buna.

Burma—U. S. Army bombers, flying from bases in India, renewed their attacks on Japanese docks and ships at Rangoon, Burma, and returned without loss.

Hot Seat Middle East

World Wide Features

As military action speeds in the middle east, the position of Turkey, between the Caucasus and Syria, becomes more precarious. Our enemy in World War I, Turkey has been praised by Secretary Hull for "correctly" conducting her foreign affairs today.

Since World War I, Turkey's 18,000,000 people have modernized, westernized. Becoming a republic in 1923, Turkey under Kemel Ataturk and present President Ismet Inonu, has discarded fez and veils; abolished slavery; adopted the 24-hour clock and Georgian calendar; established Sunday as the day of rest instead of Friday, the Mohammedans' Sabbath.

Turkey has rich natural resources of chrome ore, zinc, manganese, antimony, copper—resources needed by the Allies. She lacks industry, now gets war equipment from the U. S.

Her conscripted army in 1940 was estimated at 500,000, with a potential of 2,000,000; navy, 4,800; air force, 8,500 men with about 370 first-line craft. As war has drawn closer, the Turks have built secretly.

Allies Collide With Japanese

conclusions that "this is a finished fight."

The Japanese warships which withdrew from the Solomons battle area late last week, still remained a threat to the American hold on Guadalcanal's airbase and the secretary asserted that "we thoroughly expect and confidently expect that they will come back." Meanwhile, he added, both the American and enemy fleets have more time to strengthen their forces for the next sea battle.

Charged With Homicide

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—James G. Mallon, 32-year-old soda dispenser, was arraigned in Queens felony court yesterday and charged with homicide in connection with the churchyard slaying of Mrs. Carol Dugan Tuttle, 35, a pretty blonde waitress with whom he admitted being friendly. Magistrate Francis X. Giaccone ordered Mallon held without bail for action by the Queens grand jury after his attorney, William E. Kennedy, said that Mallon wished to waive examination.

Each group organized for Bundles for America is to keep an emergency closet for its own community, sending the surplus to the Kingston headquarters. The county unit of Bundles for America has been offered a room in the Stuyvesant Hotel and will meet this winter on Tuesday of each week for the whole day. Miss Easton was most appreciative of the generous "Bundles" from the Highland Council and commented not only on the quantity but on the quality of the workmanship of the salvaged garments and quilts. Mr. Callahan also obtained patterns for leather mittens for Marines and Coast Guards and also for baby bootees to be made from light colored felt hats. The committee in charge on Wednesday of this week was: Mrs. Jacob Schuhle and Mrs. William Russell.

Dewey Reception Is Given

Pawling, N. Y., Nov. 7 (AP) — Three hundred neighbors of governor-elect Thomas E. Dewey welcomed him back to his farm home in this Dutchess county village last night on his first visit since he led the Republican sweep of New York in Tuesday's balloting. When Dewey stepped from the train he found the station platform trimmed with bunting and flying the stars and stripes. At his own request, the home-coming ceremony was simple and brief. Supervisor Egbert T. Green, spokesman for the villagers extended greetings and mentioned that Dewey had polled a larger plurality than "any other candidate in the history of the village."

ON HOARDING

Rationing is the order of the day and that it is necessary in many respects, nobody can seriously deny. Rubber, gasoline, oil and sugar have already come under rigid control. One other commodity which has become due for rationing in the not distant future is coffee. Reason for this is given in lack of transportation. It is the same old story—plenty of coffee in Brazil, but not enough ships to get it here. This, plus greater coffee demands for the armies of the United Nations, has apparently brought rationing near.

But it would seem that there is still another important reason why rationing will be necessary and that is—hoarding. It is stated that despite the greater need for coffee, the nation's supply, except for some local shortages, is still normal—in other words there is as much coffee on hand as usual.

The apparent shortage therefore is said to be due to the hoarding of coffee by timid consumers who are afraid they may sometime be without their favorite beverage. It is easy to see that if thousands of families all over the country each put fifty or a hundred pounds of coffee into the basement, there is bound to be a shortage. As there is hoarding of this kind, rationing is now inevitable so that everyone may have coffee, and if the statisticians are to be believed, everyone could have coffee without rationing if it were not for the hoarders. The same thing could have been true of sugar, as the shortage appeared due to hoarding in the early days of the war.

At the same time it is declared by an official of the O.P.A. that the shortage of Nylon hose is artificial. Any woman who likes these filmy stockings can testify that there is a shortage. Yet this official says there are a million dozen pairs of Nylon hose on hand which would seem to be "some stockings." In this instance it is not the consumer, but the wholesalers, and other distributors who are blamed for the hoarding and the artificial shortage.

Stories have gone out recently to the effect that there are plenty of tires on hand and they would soon be offered through the regular channels of trade. In this latter story the wish is apparently the father of the thought. William M. Jeffers condemns these rumors and says there is a real shortage of tires. In this instance, therefore, conservation—not hoarding, of tires is necessary.

While there is room for controversy over some of these problems, it seems to be a fact that timid folks who buy up more than they need at the time are in part responsible for shortages and rationing. The only thing it pays to hoard is War Bonds and Stamps.

FAILURE INEXCUSABLE

A critical fire hazard has been created by the emergency occupation of old buildings to carry on war work.

These older buildings are numbered in thousands against one new building and they are being put to uses for which they were not designed. Dwellings are hurriedly changed to apartment buildings, garages and old stores turned into warehouses, rundown factories rushed into service for new industries. Existing structures of all kinds are being used without adequate fire protection for their new contents.

A recent bulletin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters points out the principal dangers, together with corrective measures. Vertical travel of fire is probaly the factor of greatest moment in connection with safety to life and property in most of the existing two or three stories in height. Heated gases, some of which may under certain conditions be explosive, rise and expand into the upper stories of a building. This spread of gas may take place for a considerable time before the fire is discovered, and under these conditions the entire structure may become a death trap to all in or near it.

The cure for this danger is enclosure of all stairs, elevators, escalators and dumb waiter shafts, and the use of wired glass for windows in light shafts.

Excessive floor area, without subdividing walls or fire partitions, is one of the most common objectionable features of many of our industrial plants being built today, as well as some built previously. Outside streams cannot cover the interior of such buildings, and without perfect fire protection, they become susceptible to heavy fire loss.

Every employe and employer should do his utmost to protect our war industries against fire. Failure is inexcusable.

GOODBYE, PVT. HARGROVE!

It is a dreadful blow to thousands of readers to realize that never again will any corporal or sergeant be able to begin a complaint with "See Here, Private Hargrove!" Because there is no longer any such person to bawl out.

Private Marion Hargrove, believe it or not, has become a corporal. He wears two stripes and can carry a whistle and say "See Here, Private Smith!"

What's even worse, he's being married this month—to a Smith College girl. Thousands of readers are contributing royalties to the matrimonial future. The price is paid with great joy and thanksgiving, be it said, by those who enjoyed the book. All they hope is that Benedict Corporal Hargrove—soon, no doubt, to be Major, Colonel and later General Hargrove—may not be spoiled by his swift rise, and that before he joins the stuffywuffies he may give his world another book as good.

No more buggies for the babies nor silk stockings for their Ma's,
Rationed gasoline for autos and thin beefsteak for their Pa's.
Coffee short and sugar shorter, no bananas, blankets thin:
That's what folks are buying bonds for—it's a war they've got to win.

Henry George said: "We speak of Liberty as one thing, and of virtue, wealth, knowledge, national strength and national independence as other things. But of all these, Liberty is the source, the mother, the necessary condition."

Are the various armed forces of this country going to fight the enemy, or each other?

Another thing—people are really beginning again to appreciate the right to vote.

Where is that superman Rommel, who lately was swinging Africa by the tail?

ANTI-NOISE CAMPAIGN

One of the gratifying campaigns of recent years is that of the National Noise Abatement Council. It is a campaign of education in that it has been able to prove to the authorities of various municipalities that noise interferes with health, cuts down production, and lowers the quality of service of all affected by it. There are, of course, some individuals who seem to thrive on noise, but the average individual cannot eat or digest his food properly, cannot think or write, cannot do precision work properly with loud noises about him.

Aside from its interference with health and work, loud noise distracts individuals so that they are a danger to themselves and to others. In Nashville, Tenn., Police Chief John Griffin, pointing to a sudden decline in traffic accidents and arrests on traffic regulations declared both facts to be the result in part of the city's new anti-horn blowing law, the anti-noise ordinance being the principal factor.

"Nashville motorists are now driving with one foot on the brake rather than with one hand on the horn."

Within a week after an anti-noise campaign started in Columbus, Georgia, Chief of Police Newberry stated that horn blowing on the city streets had been reduced 90 per cent.

In Cleveland, the anti-noise measure provides fines of from One Dollar to Ten Dollars and one to ten-day work sentences for violation. The ordinance forbids any unreasonably loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise, the ringing of bells and the blowing of horns except for warning signals; harsh and loud noises from radios, phonographs or musical instruments; sounds made by animals or birds; automobile, motorcycle or other vehicles so out of repair or so loaded that an annoying or rattling sound is produced.

The Anti-Noise Council recognizes that there must be necessary noises which cannot or should not be stopped. Their idea is to try to have the public learn the advantages to health, work and happiness of doing away with unnecessary noise. Once this is recognized it will not be a matter for the police or the health departments to enforce, because everybody will cooperate.

As mentioned before, noise tenses nerves and muscles. Tensed nerves and muscles cause tiredness of mind and body and lessens the amount of mental and physical work accomplished.

Many persons suffer from neurasthenia—mental and physical tiredness, especially in these days of strain. Send for Dr. Barton's interesting leaflet on this subject entitled 'Neurasthenia'. To obtain it just send five cents (preferably in coin) to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., and ask for this leaflet by name, mentioning The Kingston Daily Freeman.

Fabulous Gold Towns Fall in Home-Front Blitz

By JOHN GROVER
Wide World Features Writer

Lead, S. D.—A war-blown piece of paper hit this town the hardest blow any American community has suffered in this war.

The piece of paper was the order banning gold mining operations in western America. Every one of the 7,000 men, women and children in Lead and the 4,000 in her gay, playground sister town of Deadwood felt the weight of it.

What happened here can happen anywhere. It probably will, as the U. S. gets deeper in the war, and more and more nonessential industry is curtailed to send labor into essential war industry. So there's a lesson and an example in these black hills of South Dakota.

They Live for Gold

Lead and Deadwood have lived for and by gold ever since Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane prowled these tall purple hills. The fabulous Homestake mine is Lead and Deadwood. Its payroll and the fat dividends that go largely to the surrounding trade territory support the retail, entertainment and service enterprises that are the only other businesses. Its been operating since 1876.

I arrived in Lead (pronounced leed) just after the government shutdown order became effective. Like a recent earthquake, it was the sole topic of conversation in bars, restaurants, hotels and shops.

What the shutdown order is doing and will do to Lead-Deadwood is a matter of opinion.

There is the government version. There is the company's. There is the side of the hard-hit and apprehensive retail merchant. There is the story of the miners themselves.

The government ordered the gold mines closed to force the miners into the copper, lead, zinc and molybdenum mines. Gold isn't important now, in a world crying for practical war metals.

Suffering Unavoidable

The government has arranged to underwrite the transportation of the miners to Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, but some suffering is unavoidable. The only answer to that is that this country is fighting a war.

Guy N. Bjorge, general manager of Homestake, speaks for the vast majority of the town when he charges that gold mine closure is unwise governmental bungling. I found this a prevailing sentiment, from small beer joints to the best hotels. Lead and Deadwood aren't convinced that the move was necessary.

It is pointed out that only 2,500—of fewer—hard rock miners were engaged in gold mining in the whole U. S. (Of Homestake's 2,000 payroll, 800 were miners; the rest worked above ground.) They argue in Lead and Deadwood that the output of this comparative handful of miners forced into copper mines won't make much difference in the war effort, and certainly won't compensate for lowered morale and loss of tax revenues and the shattered economy of a wide trade area.

It's contended that most gold mines produce some of the critical war metals as by-products, have been begging the government for an opportunity to increase this output, but have been put off.

The business men, as a group, second these arguments and add new ones. They say the order won't accomplish its purpose, that fewer than half the 800 hard-rock men at Homestake will leave for new diggings, because half of them own homes and are over 50 years old. All it will do, they claim, is ruin business without aiding the war effort appreciably.

While the miners complain, their patriotism can't be questioned any more than the loyalty of a soldier who beefs about conditions and then goes into battle to fight his head off. Beefing is an American privilege, here as everywhere else.

They say they'll go anywhere the government says it's necessary. They're signing up at the U. S. employment office daily, by dozens, for work in the copper mines. Gold miners hate copper mines; they say the smell is awful, after the mile-deep, cold cleanliness of Homestake.

Editor Is Optimistic

Lee Morford, editor of the Deadwood "Pioneer-Times," takes the long view that Lead and Deadwood will come back.

The gold is here. It'll keep. It's in temporary eclipse in a war world. But men go to gold like compass needles to a magnet. Even the Axis nations who scoff at gold make very sure to grab all of it in sight in a conquered country. So Morford reasons that the towns will burgeon when gold takes its usual place again.

The Homestake management plans to keep as much of its loyal, veteran organization together as possible. It'll need a maintenance crew to keep the labyrinthine mine, with its 218 miles of railroad underground in shape. Other operations will keep a few men working.

Meanwhile, the boarded - up house is the symbol of Lead and Deadwood.

Of those who depended on the mine payroll to exist, the fly-by-nights, the honkytonk girls in wide-open Deadwood, the dealers in the gambling houses, the rootless ones who go where the pickings are best, have gone or are making ready.

The solid, established business men will stay.

When New Dealers Try to Explain Tuesday's Vote the Revelations Are of Critical Significance

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 7—Explanations emanating from the administration as to the severe defeat suffered at the polls last Tuesday may have more than passing significance. Thus Vice President Wallace evidently believes that the nation still supports the New Deal but that many millions of voters just didn't go to the polls.

The Vice President endeavored also to characterize the Republicans as "well to do," and his statement that only the "well to do" had time to go to the ballot box is a comment that must be attributed to naivete rather than to a knowledge of American politics.

Just why the "well-to-do" Democrats—comprising the workers who are earning higher wages than ever before in American history—stayed away from the polls when so important an election as that involving the Congress was at stake is not explained on the ground that those who stayed away were "satisfied" and hence didn't go to protest. Such an analysis of the reasons why people go to the polls doesn't seem to explain why so many people went to the polls in 1936 and 1940. They were supposed at that time not to be protesting at all, but merely to be expressing their gratitude for the many benefits conferred upon them by the New Deal administration.

The stay-at-home vote is not at all puzzling to anyone who is familiar with politics. People stay at home usually because they are disgusted with their own political party and do not want to vote for the opposition. Again and again attempts to reason with such folks that staying at home helps the opposition has been of little avail, the real point being that they don't care if their own party is defeated—their grievances make them feel that way.

As for the question of whether a total of 26,000,000 or 50,000,000 represents a true expression of the American electorate, experience with literally hundreds of surveys of human behavior which have been made by statisticians with all sorts of products and with all sorts of elections has proved that if a survey is made with due consideration for geography and other important factors, the survey is accurate even when only a few thousand people are sampled. Where the sample is as big as 26,000,000, it is in accord with all scientific findings on the subject to say that the result would probably not have varied even as much as one per cent if double the number had participated.

But doubtless the fact that a smaller vote was polled will be used as an alibi by the administration. One excuse, however, which also came from Vice President Wallace will be easy to disprove. He said that if the soldiers and sailors had been voting, the result would have been different. Judging by the comments that the service men make when they get home on leave, Mr. Wallace is far from familiar with the facts. The service men, it is reported from every side, are unusually bitter about what they consider to be burgling of the war effort back in Washington. If the vote had been augmented by the ballots of soldiers and sailors, it seems probable that the opposition or protest majority would have been considerably larger than it was last Tuesday.

If the New Dealers are going on the assumption that the election really didn't mean anything and that they have a majority of the voters back of the New Deal program of social reform, the Republican leaders might as well begin celebrating the 1944 election, because nothing would contribute more to a landslide two years hence than for the New Deal tacticians to assume that everything is fine throughout the country and that all that it's necessary to do next time is to get out the Democratic vote.

The Republicans know by bitter experience that stay-at-home votes mean a protest almost as deep as that of the voters who go to the polls and register their protest. The Democrats also ought to know that the women voters, who have time to go to the polls, would have been enough to swing the election if they really favored the New Deal. Many reports are reaching here that the women voters have been antagonized by the New Deal's clumsy handling of rationing and the draft and that they were in the forefront of Tuesday's protest.

The war from all angles—

In exactly fourteen seconds I pulled fourteen books about the war off my shelf of current books. There are still some there. There are far too many, apparently because the publishers, with few exceptions, believe that each firm should have at least two books on every possible war "angle." It needs strength to swim to the top of a morass like this.

Cecil Brown's is called "Suez to Singapore." It reads like those tactless broadcasts Mr. Brown made after the "Repulse" sank and tossed him into the money. The book is good reporting, founded on experience, egotism and dislike of certain Britishers. Stanley Johnston was also on a sinking ship, the U.S.S. Lexington, and his "Queen of the Flat-tops" is extremely good reporting and quite as exciting to read.

The same is true of Russell Whelan's "The Flying Tigers" This is Mr. Whelan's story of the seventy American fliers whose 55 planes knocked down 286 Japanese planes — there were many more, but only proven kills were counted. Would you care to know how 1,500 Jap flyers can be killed with a loss of eight Americans, read Mr. Whelan.

Upton Close is one of the few "experts" who bases his radio analyses on a lifetime study of his field. Mr. Close has always been an Orientalist, and this, commands respect for his "Behind the Face of Japan." There is the same authentic experience behind Alexander Werth's "The Twilight of France," which is a considered intelligent and very readable account of the years of the locust 1933-40, as they were lived in France. The big and the little traitors are all there, and so is their corrosive philosophy.

Reynolds and Eleanor Packard's "Balcony Empire" is first of a new crop of books on Italy. It is the story of the two great crimes the Italian people never will forgive Mussolini: loss of freedom (the Packards call it democracy), and the sell-out to Germany. There is a gigantic pro-Allied fifth column waiting in Italy, they believe, and they have ideas for its use.

OLD FUR—NEW COAT

In these days of conservation, you're taking pride in your possessions, and making many of last year's clothes do. Here's a hint for that old fur coat which doesn't seem smart enough to wear, and yet isn't shabby enough to throw away. Convert the fur into a lining for a wool coat. They are new this year.

Between 1820 and 1940 more than 38,000,000 immigrants entered the United States.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

One of the most interesting and well acted plays in the history of the Kingston High School was the presentation of the four act drama "Strongheart" by members of the high school A. A. A., on November 18, 1927.

The title role was played by Herrick Schoonmaker, and the others in the cast included Arthur Scott, Harry LeFever, Jr., George Will, Clifford Miller, John Shields, Alfred Hasbrouck, John Watts, John Thompson, Beverly Schmidt Also Ruth McLaughlin, Margaret Brown, Vivian Klothe, Ann Herzog, Homer Brown, James Halloran, Jay Molyneaux, Burt Van Deusen, Robert Brown, Henry Brigham, Philip Jones, William Jones, Alfred Lyons and John Mohr.

In the days at the turn of the century three of the best known bass-baritone singers in Kingston were William R. Anderson, Richard Dawe and Charles Knight. All three died some years ago.

Mr. Knight for many years was engaged in the metal cap manufacturing business on Pine Grove avenue and later on St. James street. In addition to being a vocalist he was a composer of note and composed some excellent songs. Mr. Dawe during the administration of Mayor Palmer Canfield served as superintendent of the city hall, while Mr. Anderson operated a print shop on West Strand.

All three men in the Gay Nineties appeared in a number of operas presented by local talent, and in addition served as soloists in the choirs of the city's churches.

And speaking of churches I recall that on October 21, 1927, St. John's Church on Albany avenue was dedicated by Bishop William T. Manning, and the Rev. W. P. Kemper was installed as rector of the church.

Older readers will recall the years when St. John's Church stood on Wall street, and when the site was sold and the present Newberry store erected on the former church site, the materials in the old church were removed to Albany avenue and the church re-erected on its present site.

Turning back the city's pages to October 19, 1917, I recall the fine benefit Red Cross concert arranged by Miss Virginia LosKamp, contralto soloist of the Rondout Presbyterian Church. She was assisted that night by Reinald Werrenrath, noted American baritone, who had appeared on the stage of the Metropolitan Theatre in New York, and made Red Seal records for the old Victor phonograph.

Miss LosKamp served as soloist and choir director in the downtown church. I recall that in 1918 she and Miss Elsa Hiltebrant, the church organist, were granted a leave of absence to go overseas and entertain the soldiers of the U. S. Army then in France during the first World War. The two women made a tour of the camps, singing and playing for the soldiers.

WAVE, JR.

Every woman loves a uniform. If your little girls aspires to the Navy, there is a complete oufit for her fashioned after the WAVES uniform. If she prefers the Army, she'll delight in the new WAAC uniform made for the little soldiers.

American Athens Comes to Light

Civilization in Tula Was Great, Something Happened Then

Wide World Features

Mexico City — In Tula the magnificent, center of life and arts and learning, Tula with its great temples and palaces, ruled a white god whose wisdom was unbounded—

Great was the civilization that flourished in Tula. Then something happened—something in a lost chapter of American history, hundreds of years before the arrival of the Spaniards. A curtain was drawn on Tula, a curtain which scientists believe finally they are raising.

They believe that they have found Tula again and that the treasures they are digging out of its buried ruins will cast new and important light on America prior to the conquest.

The work is being done by archaeologists of the Mexican National Institute of Anthropology and History. Huge stone warriors 15 feet high, temples, stadiums and pyramids have come to light. In certain instances there is a similarity of idea to the Egyptian. There is a marked likeness to the Mayan.

Relatively near Tula lies another aged metropolis. From its mounds also have come pyramids, temples and fortresses. If the real Tula is at the new diggings then this other metropolis—Teotihuacan—is probably much older even than Tula.

Tula flourished between the ninth and eleventh centuries. Teotihuacan may, the archaeologists say, date from before and even long before the Christian era.

Teotihuacan is 32 miles from Mexico City. The present diggings are 18 miles farther, in a straight line, in the state of Hidalgo.

About the ninth century a less civilized but more warlike people descended from the north, conquered and mixed with this race. From the mixture came the Toltecs and from somewhere came a great and wise ruler. He was Ce Acatl Topiltzin Quetzalcoatl, "god of the air," whose symbol was a plumed serpent.

The Toltecs built a great metropolis, Tula, and for at least two centuries it flourished. Then something happened. The curtain was drawn.

As far back as 1879 the French explorer Desire Charnay uncovered interesting buildings at the site of the present new diggings, but there was not enough to convince science that he had hit upon the real Tula.

Recent investigations, however, have produced such sensational results that the Institute believes it has really found Tula. The region all about is sprinkled with mounds, large and small, that are believed to cover ancient structures.

Charney himself had uncovered two great palaces. The Institute has uncovered two more palaces and many details of architecture that are termed priceless.

Decorations in the palaces and temples are dominated by finely sculptured figures of the plumed serpent, from which emerge a human head of Quetzalcoatl. Eagles, jaguars and "atlases"—that is, human male figures used as supports—have been unearthed in numbers.

"Tula," said the Institute's archaeologist Vladimiro Rosado Ojeda in a recent summary of the work, "can be said to have been the Athens of its time and place, radiating its civilization to distant parts, so that its fame was fully merited."

ROSES ARE RED

A miniature version of a florist's box is what one cosmetics firm is using to package its newest shade of nailpolish. Quite in keeping, the shade is that of a full-blown rose, a relief from the glory reds we've seen too much of.

Do You Want to Raise Your Son to Be a Hero?

(Wide World Features)

Do you want your child to be a hero, to face bravely the hazards and hardships of war?

Here's a simple prescription by Dr. Ernest G. Osborne, head of early childhood education at Teachers College, Columbia University:

1. Be brave yourself.
2. Give your children a wartime job — such as collecting scrap—and let them know they're helping both you and the war effort.
3. Make them feel emotionally secure, that mother and father love them that they're part of the family.

Follow these rules, says Dr. Osborne, and you'll find that "war can be a blessing in disguise for children." They will come out of it stronger tnd more self-reliant.

"It is almost miraculous the way a child picks up an adult's attitude," he says. "If you face war bravely, children — whether infants or school-age youngsters—will do likewise. If you're timid and fearful, they'll be the same way."

He cites instances from blitzed Britain. Older children who cared for younger children and sisters, or who escorted the aged and ill to safety, enjoyed the sense of importance it gave them. They forgot all about the danger of falling bombs — and pulled through the most violent raids with a stronger morale.

Excluding unusually sensitive children, he says, boys and girls upset by war and showing recurrent fears of its effects felt insecure at home, not fully loved or appreciated by their parents.

Children sure of their parents' love who were told the whole truth when raid sirens rang or father marched off to war, continued to live normally and happily.

Good Taste Today

Turning a family friend into a judge by making him listen to family disputes is discussed in this reader's letter: "I wish you'd write a few words to those who are prone to air their domestic troubles to the complete discomfort of an innocent third person. There are certain old friends who get hurt if I don't go to see them, yet everytime I go something turns up to make me wish I'd never gone in the first place.

It's a mother and daughter situation, the mother living with the married daughter. At times they are both right and at times both wrong, but I don't want to take sides no matter how I feel; and never do. But I don't like to be a witness to their differences. Other friends have remarked this same thing. Maybe if you would say something about the bad manners of forcing their guests at tea to feel that they are members of a jury, perhaps it would do some good to know what others think of this habit. Perhaps it might cure them?

As to this last I think it doubtful. Habits are not often cured even by being told about them directly—let alone so indirectly as by a "piece in the paper." But it is of course true, that there is no surer way of making our friends avoid us, than by forcing them to listen to family disputes.

A Suitable Gift

Dear Mrs. Post: I'd like to give a Christmas present to the family of a girl friend, who invited me several times to stay with them last summer. They loved picnics with cooking out-of-doors and we went on one every time I was there. I've thought perhaps a set of picnic dishes, or something along that line which they could put to good use would be appropriate. But then I got to wondering if, since they hadn't any special picnic appointments, could they feel that I thought they should have had?

Answer: A Christmas present by all means, and it seems to me that nothing could be more suitable than something useful for a picnic. To give them what they already have would be senseless and I certainly think they would be lacking in ordinary common sense if they objected to your giving them something needful as well as useful. In other words, I see no problem in this question.

Children's Clothes at a Wedding

Dear Mrs. Post: What shall my two daughters aged nine and seven wear at my son's wedding. They will sit with me in the front pew and are they supposed to go up the aisle with me? Is a baby —aged two—ever taken to a wedding?

Answer: They should wear exactly what they would wear to a party with the addition of hats and special attention paid to the becomingness of these. A baby of two is often taken to a family wedding.

Twenty oft-repeated questions about special problems of table service and setting are answered in Mrs. Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Table Setting," which you may have by sending ten cents in coin and a three-cent stamp to cover postage and handling. Address Mrs. Post, care of The Kingston Daily Freeman, Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

A Mother's Request

I'll be careful with the cocoa, the
coffee and the tea,
And when it comes to gas and
tires Uncle Sam can count on me;
I'll save my paper and my scraps
for bullets to those pesky Japs,
While as for rationed sugar cards
I'll only think them fun,
If Uncle Sam some future day
just sends me back my son.
Mrs. Pearl Jackson.

Little Mary was left to fix the lunch, and when her mother returned with a friend, she observed that Mary had the tea strained.

Mother—Did you find the lost strainer, dear? (as they were eating).

Little Mary—No, mother, I used the fly swatter.

This tire and gasoline shortage is going to make a lot of pet bunions cry to high heaven.

The three major menaces on our highways are listed as drunken driving, uncontrolled thumbing, and indiscriminate spooning—in other words, hic, hike and hug.

Education. Never be ashamed to own that you have been in the wrong. All the mistakes that we make seem to be a necessary part of our education. To admit that you have erred is to say indirectly to your fellows that you are wiser today than yesterday.

The customer couldn't see eye-to-eye with the taxicab driver on the matter of fare. Finally he said in exasperation.

Customer—See here, I haven't been riding in cabs for ten years for nothing.

Driver—No, but I'll bet you've been trying to.

White-walled Charm

Once she had not many friends;
See how time can make amends.
Lovers seldom trod her ground;
See how fortune's wheel turns
round.
Now, from shortly after dawn
Suitors troop across her lawn,
Lovers gather by the score,
Crowd each other from her door.
True, she wears the same old face,
True, her form has no new grace;
But her car has four new tires—
What every man, at heart, desires.
—Elijah L. Jacobs.

We rather like the story about the west side doctor in Chicago who came out to find his car sitting on the wheel hubs, sans tires. Inside, he found a note: "Dear doctor: Enclosed is $100. You can get new tires; we can't.

It doesn't require a musical education to play dumb bell.

A local man's idea of double bad luck is finding his automobile with a flat tire and a parking tag on it.

Father—Didn't you promise me to be a good boy?

Son—Yes, father.

Father—And didn't I promise you a thrashing if you weren't?

Son—Yes, father, but as I've broken my promise you needn't keep yours.

Safer

Oh, stop and let the train go by
It hardly takes a minute;
Your car then starts again intact,
And what is more, you're in it.

Friend—Have you forgotten that five dollars I loaned you six weeks ago?

Man—Not yet, give me time.

The jokes about the rubber shortage seem to be wearing out faster than the tires.

State May Drop Regents Exams During War

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 6 (AP)—The possibility of dropping state regents examinations in high school subjects as part of the wartime streamlining of secondary school programs is being considered by the New York association of deans and other guidance personnel.

"There is no longer time to master all the facts of history, or read all classics," Harry J. Linton, assistant schools superintendent at Schenectady, declared yesterday in a plea for streamlining high school subjects to fit students for wartime jobs, both civilian and military.

"Quite possibly the regents examinations should be dropped in some or possibly all high school subjects for the duration," he said at the opening of the association's three-day meeting.

Courses must make room "for information regarding the armed forces, for discussion of war aims and for the following day by day of the war's progress," he said.

To effect this program, school hours may have to be lengthened and evening sessions held, he added.

Veterans Favor Bells On Thanksgiving Day

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP)—The Illinois Veterans of Foreign Wars urge the nation to observe Thanksgiving by ringing bells—"to remind people that it is a time of thanksgiving to God for the blessings of freedom and prosperity that we enjoy."

Asserting that there was "no outward expression of Thanksgiving Day," State Commander Nelson R. Knudsen said the organization was making a nation-wide appeal for a more spiritual observance of the holiday. The group suggests ringing of bells in churches, schools and railroad engines.

"We observe Armistice Day with a moment of facing east in salute while whistles blow," Knudsen said, "and Christmas carols remind us of yuletide. Bell ringing will remind us to pray on Thanksgiving Day and to take anew the pledge that we will give all that liberty may live."

'Yank' Levy Tells Why Nazis Can't Take Stalingrad

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Wide World Features Writer

Washington — The battle of Stalingrad is the biggest battle ever fought in a large city—a multiple series of terrific struggles from street to street, from house to house, from roof to cellar to sewer.

American soldiers probably will have to do some fighting of this kind when the drive against the Nazis gets going on the continent.

Apart from the courage of the Russian defenders, there are two main reasons given by military men for the prolonged Stalingrad resistance against wave after wave of Hitler's best legions:

The Reds' knowledge of guerilla tactics and the advantage possessed by defenders in a city battle.

Bert "Yank" Levy, former Cleveland boy and soldier of fortune who is teaching the British Home Guard how to defend towns, says that in a city prepared against attack the advantage in street fighting is invariably with the defenders, who are familiar with the battleground.

Levy, who fought with the International Brigade against Franco in Spain, points out that the man who knows a neighborhood can always keep the enemy guessing. If you know your sewer system thoroughly you may be able to transport troops behind the enemy lines and surprise him.

In his book on guerilla warfare (published by Penguin Books, Inc., and the Infantry Journal), Levy writes that Nazi tanks and dive bombers are of little value in street fighting. A tank might smash through flimsy cottages but cannot plow over or under rows of houses.

In street fighting, bombs from invading aircraft are likely to harm invading troops as much as defenders. A tank has to keep to comparatively narrow streets, where an over-turned streetcar or a couple of earth-filled trucks may stop it. Furthermore, says Levy, tanks can be fought effectively by anti-tank grenades flung from roofs or windows.

Levy gives these tips on the strategy of tough street fighting and house to house combat:

"While you stay in buildings you are protected but as soon as you go out on the open street you are at the mercy of machine gun fire. Get your men across the street in the night time if you can. If you can't wait provide them with a smoke screen.

"Do not rush the door of an enemy-occupied building. And be sure to spring any booby trap before you enter. Two Tommy machine gunners and one grenadier should approach under the covering fire of their comrades. Then, from a prone position alongside the door the grenadier flings in a grenade and, just to make sure, pitches in another.

"Then one Tommy gunner fires from just outside the door across and up into the far corner of the ceiling, covering about one-quarter of the ceiling with his shots. The second machine gunner dashes for the corner of the room under the peppered part of the ceiling and sweeps the rest of the ceiling while the other Tommy gunner is reloading. By that time any Nazi upstairs is either dead or dancing hard.

"One man makes for the stairway covered by bullets of the others shooting ahead of him. At the same time two or three men can enter the house and begin to 'mouse hole' into the next room from the secured ground floor while the others are securing the upper floors. Then they 'mouse hole' through the upper rooms."

Mouse holing, says Levy, is simple work with a pick or a crowbar. You first make a small hole, toss a grenade through it, enlarge the hole and toss a second through it from inside one room or building to the next, thus making reasonably sure of disposing of everybody in the adjoining rooms.

Large-scale rationing of food products has been made effective in Bermuda, says the Department of Commerce.

ON HOARDING

Rationing is the order of the day and that it is necessary in many respects, nobody can seriously deny. Rubber, gasoline, oil and sugar have already come under rigid control. One other commodity which has become due for rationing in the not distant future is coffee. Reason for this is given in lack of transportation. It is the same old story—plenty of coffee in Brazil, but not enough ships to get it here. This, plus greater coffee demands for the armies of the United Nations, has apparently brought rationing near.

But it would seem that there is still another important reason why rationing will be necessary and that is—hoarding. It is stated that despite the greater need for coffee, the nation's supply, except for some local shortages, is still normal—in other words there is as much coffee on hand as usual.

The apparent shortage therefore is said to be due to the hoarding of coffee by timid consumers who are afraid they may sometime be without their favorite beverage. It is easy to see that if thousands of families all over the country each put fifty or a hundred pounds of coffee into the basement, there is bound to be a shortage. As there is hoarding of this kind, rationing is now inevitable so that everyone may have coffee, and if the statisticians are to be believed, everyone could have coffee without rationing if it were not for the hoarders. The same thing could have been true of sugar, as the shortage appeared due to hoarding in the early days of the war.

At the same time it is declared by an official of the O.P.A. that the shortage of Nylon hose is artificial. Any woman who likes these filmy stockings can testify that there is a shortage. Yet this official says there are a million dozen pairs of Nylon hose on hand which would seem to be "some stockings." In this instance it is not the consumer, but the wholesalers, and other distributors who are blamed for the hoarding and the artificial shortage.

Stories have gone out recently to the effect that there are plenty of tires on hand and they would soon be offered through the regular channels of trade. In this latter story the wish is apparently the father of the thought. William M. Jeffers condemns these rumors and says there is a real shortage of tires. In this instance, therefore, conservation—not hoarding, of tires is necessary.

While there is room for controversy over some of these problems, it seems to be a fact that timid folks who buy up more than they need at the time are in part responsible for shortages and rationing. The only thing it pays to hoard is War Bonds and Stamps.

FAILURE INEXCUSABLE

A critical fire hazard has been created by the emergency occupation of old buildings to carry on war work.

These older buildings are numbered in thousands against one new building and they are being put to uses for which they were not designed. Dwellings are hurriedly changed to apartment buildings, garages and old stores turned into warehouses, rundown factories rushed into service for new industries. Existing structures of all kinds are being used without adequate fire protection for their new contents.

A recent bulletin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters points out the principal dangers, together with corrective measures. Vertical travel of fire is probaly the factor of greatest moment in connection with safety to life and property in most of the existing two or three stories in height. Heated gases, some of which may under certain conditions be explosive, rise and expand into the upper stories of a building. This spread of gas may take place for a considerable time before the fire is discovered, and under these conditions the entire structure may become a death trap to all in or near it.

The cure for this danger is enclosure of all stairs, elevators, escalators and dumb waiter shafts, and the use of wired glass for windows in light shafts.

Excessive floor area, without subdividing walls or fire partitions, is one of the most common objectionable features of many of our industrial plants being built today, as well as some built previously. Outside streams cannot cover the interior of such buildings, and without perfect fire protection, they become susceptible to heavy fire loss.

Every employe and employer should do his utmost to protect our war industries against fire. Failure is inexcusable.

GOODBYE, PVT. HARGROVE!

It is a dreadful blow to thousands of readers to realize that never again will any corporal or sergeant be able to begin a complaint with "See Here, Private Hargrove!" Because there is no longer any such person to bawl out.

Private Marion Hargrove, believe it or not, has become a corporal. He wears two stripes and can carry a whistle and say "See Here, Private Smith!"

What's even worse, he's being married this month—to a Smith College girl. Thousands of readers are contributing royalties to the matrimonial future. The price is paid with great joy and thanksgiving, be it said, by those who enjoyed the book. All they hope is that Benedict Corporal Hargrove—soon, no doubt, to be Major, Colonel and later General Hargrove—may not be spoiled by his swift rise, and that before he joins the stuffy-wuffies he may give his world another book as good.

No more buggies for the babies nor silk stockings for their Ma's,
Rationed gasoline for autos and thin beef-
steak for their Pa's.
Coffee short and sugar shorter, no bananas,
blankets thin:
That's what folks are buying bonds for—it's a war they've got to win.

Henry George said: "We speak of Liberty as one thing, and of virtue, wealth, knowledge, national strength and national independence as other things. But of all these, Liberty is the source, the mother, the necessary condition."

Are the various armed forces of this country going to fight the enemy, or each other?

Another thing—people are really beginning again to appreciate the right to vote.

Where is that superman Rommel, who lately was swinging Africa by the tail?

ANTI-NOISE CAMPAIGN

One of the gratifying campaigns of recent years is that of the National Noise Abatement Council. It is a campaign of education in that it has been able to prove to the authorities of various municipalities that noise interferes with health, cuts down production, and lowers the quality of service of all affected by it. There are, of course, some individuals who seem to thrive on noise, but the average individual cannot eat or digest his food properly, cannot think or write, cannot do precision work properly with loud noises about him.

Aside from its interference with health and work, loud noise distracts individuals so that they are a danger to themselves and to others. In Nashville, Tenn., Police Chief John Griffin, pointing to a sudden decline in traffic accidents and arrests on traffic regulations declared both facts to be the result in part of the city's new anti-horn blowing law, the anti-noise ordinance being the principal factor.

"Nashville motorists are now driving with one foot on the brake rather than with one hand on the horn."

Within a week after an anti-noise campaign started in Columbus, Georgia, Chief of Police Newberry stated that horn blowing on the city streets had been reduced 90 per cent.

In Cleveland, the anti-noise measure provides fines of from One Dollar to Ten Dollars and one to ten-day work sentences for violation. The ordinance forbids any unreasonably loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise, the ringing of bells and the blowing of horns except for warning signals: harsh and loud noises from radios, phonographs or musical instruments; sounds made by animals or birds; automobile, motorcycle or other vehicles so out of repair or so loaded that an annoying or rattling sound is produced.

The Anti-Noise Council recognizes that there must be necessary noises which cannot or should not be stopped. Their idea is to try to have the public learn the advantages to health, work and happiness of doing away with unnecessary noise. Once this is recognized it will not be a matter for the police or the health departments to enforce, because everybody will cooperate.

As mentioned before, noise tenses nerves and muscles. Tensed nerves and muscles cause tiredness of mind and body and lessens the amount of mental and physical work accomplished.

Neurasthenia

Many persons suffer from neurasthenia—mental and physical tiredness, especially in these days of strain. Send for Dr. Barton's interesting leaflet on this subject entitled "Neurasthenia". To obtain it just send five cents (preferably in coin) to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., and ask for this leaflet by name, mentioning The Kingston Daily Freeman.

Fabulous Gold Towns Fall in Home-Front Blitz

By JOHN GROVER
Wide World Features Writer

Lead, S. D.—A war-blown piece of paper hit this town the hardest blow any American community has suffered in this war.

The piece of paper was the order banning gold mining operations in western America. Every one of the 7,000 men, women and children in Lead and the 4,000 in her gay, playground sister town of Deadwood felt the weight of it.

What happened here can happen anywhere. It probably will, as the U. S. gets deeper in the war, and more and more non-essential industry is curtailed to send labor into essential war industry. So there's a lesson and an example in these black hills of South Dakota.

They Live for Gold

Lead and Deadwood have lived for and by gold ever since Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane prowled these tall purple hills. The fabulous Homestake mine is Lead and Deadwood. Its payroll and the fat dividends that go largely to the surrounding trade territory support the retail, entertainment and service enterprises that are the only other businesses. Its been operating since 1876.

I arrived in Lead (pronounced leed) just after the government shutdown order became effective. Like a recent earthquake, it was the sole topic of conversation in bars, restaurants, hotels and shops.

What the shutdown order is doing and will do to Lead-Deadwood is a matter of opinion.

There is the government version. There is the company's. There is the side of the hard-hit and apprehensive retail merchant. There is the story of the miners themselves.

The government ordered the gold mines closed to force the miners into the copper, lead, zinc and molybdenum mines. Gold isn't important now, in a world crying for practical war metals.

Suffering Unavoidable

The government has arranged to underwrite the transportation of the miners to Montana, Idaho, Arizona, Colorado, but some suffering is unavoidable. The only answer to that is that this country is fighting a war.

Guy N. Bjorge, general manager of Homestake, speaks for the vast majority of the town when he charges that gold mine closure is unwise governmental bungling. I found this a prevailing sentiment, from small beer joints to the best hotels. Lead and Deadwood aren't convinced that the move was necessary.

It is pointed out that only 2,500—or fewer—hard rock miners were engaged in gold mining in the whole U. S. (Of Homestake's 2,000 payroll, 800 were miners; the rest worked above ground.) They argue in Lead and Deadwood that the output of this comparative handful of miners forced into copper mines won't make much difference in the war effort, and certainly won't compensate for lowered morale and loss of tax revenues and the shattered economy of a wide trade area.

It's contended that most gold mines produce some of the critical war metals as by-products, have been begging the government for an opportunity to increase this output, but have been put off.

The business men, as a group, second these arguments and add new ones. They say the order won't accomplish its purpose, that fewer than half the 800 hard-rock men at Homestake will leave for new diggings, because half of them own homes and are over 50 years old. All it will do, they claim, is ruin business without aiding the war effort appreciably.

While the miners complain, their patriotism can't be questioned any more than the loyalty of a soldier who beefs about conditions and then goes into battle to fight his head off. Beefing is an American privilege, here as everywhere else.

They say they'll go anywhere the government says it's necessary. They're signing up at the U. S. employment office daily, by dozens, for work in the copper mines. Gold miners hate copper mines; they say the smell is awful, after the mile-deep, cold cleanliness of Homestake.

Editor Is Optimistic

Lee Morford, editor of the Deadwood "Pioneer-Times," takes the long view that Lead and Deadwood will come back.

The gold is here. It'll keep. It's in temporary eclipse in a war world. But men go to gold like compass needles to a magnet. Even the Axis nations who scoff at gold make very sure to grab all of it in sight in a conquered country. So Morford reasons that the towns will burgeon when gold takes its usual place again.

The Homestake management plans to keep as much of its loyal, veteran organization together as possible. It'll need a maintenance crew to keep the labyrinthine mine, with its 218 miles of railroad underground in shape. Other operations will keep a few men working.

Meanwhile, the boarded - up house is the symbol of Lead and Deadwood.

Of those who depended on the mine payroll to exist, the fly-by-nights, the honkytonk girls in wide-open Deadwood, the dealers in the gambling houses, the rootless ones who go where the pickings are best, have gone or are making ready.

The solid, established business men will stay.

Donald North, Robert Gray and Donald Gray, were among the leading collectors for the local Red Cross scrap drive.

Corp. Emmett Ganter of Ft. Edwards, Mass., is spending part of an 8-week's furlough with his mother, Mrs. Oscar Ganter of the old state road.

Among the women who recently solicited contributions for Red Cross gifts for service men were: Carrie Personeus, Edna Longyear and Margaret Winchell.

When New Dealers Try to Explain Tuesday's Vote the Revelations Are of Critical Significance

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 7—Explanations emanating from the administration as to the severe defeat suffered at the polls last Tuesday may have more than passing significance. Thus Vice President Wallace evidently believes that the nation still supports the New Deal but that many millions of voters just didn't go to the polls.

The Vice President endeavored also to characterize the Republicans as "well to do," and his statement that only the "well to do" had time to go to the ballot box is a comment that must be attributed to naivete rather than to a knowledge of American politics.

Just why the "well-to-do" Democrats—comprising the workers who are earning higher wages than ever before in American history—stayed away from the polls when so important an election as that involving the Congress was at stake is not explained on the ground that those who stayed away were "satisfied" and hence didn't go to protest. Such an analysis of the reasons why people go to the polls doesn't seem to explain why so many people went to the polls in 1936 and 1940. They were supposed at that time not to be protesting at all, but merely to be expressing their gratitude for the many benefits conferred upon them by the New Deal administration.

The stay-at-home vote is not at all puzzling to anyone who is familiar with politics. People stay at home usually because they are disgusted with their own political party and do not want to vote for the opposition. Again and again attempts to reason with such folks that staying at home helps the opposition has been of little avail, the real point being that they don't care if their own party is defeated—their grievances make them feel that way.

As for the question of whether a total of 26,000,000 or 50,000,000 represents a true expression of the American electorate, experience with literally hundreds of surveys of human behavior which have been made by statisticians with all sorts of products and with all sorts of elections has proved that if a survey is made with due consideration for geography and other important factors, the survey is accurate even when only a few thousand people are sampled. Where the sample is as big as 26,000,000, it is in accord with all scientific findings on the subject to say that the result would probably not have varied even as much as one per cent if double the number had participated.

But doubtless the fact that a smaller vote was polled will be used as an alibi by the administration. One excuse, however, which also came from Vice President Wallace will be easy to disprove. He said that if the soldiers and sailors had been voting, the result would have been different. Judging by the comments that the service men make when they get home on leave, Mr. Wallace is far from familiar with the facts. The service men, it is reported from every side, are unusually bitter about what they consider to be bungling of the war effort back in Washington. If the vote had been augmented by the ballots of soldiers and sailors, it seems probable that the opposition or protest majority would have been considerably larger than it was last Tuesday.

If the New Dealers are going on the assumption that the election really didn't mean anything and that they have a majority of the voters back of the New Deal program of social reform, the Republican leaders might as well begin celebrating the 1944 election, because nothing would contribute more to a landslide two years hence than for the New Deal tacticians to assume that everything is fine throughout the country and that all that it's necessary to do next time is to get out the Democratic vote.

The Republicans know by bitter experience that stay-at-home votes mean a protest almost as deep as that of the voters who go to the polls and register their protest. The Democrats also ought to know that the women voters, who have time to go to the polls, would have been enough to swing the election if they really favored the New Deal. Many reports are reaching here that the women voters have been antagonized by the New Deal's clumsy handling of rationing and the draft and that they were in the forefront of Tuesday's protest.

Literary Guide

By JOHN SELBY

The war from all angles—

In exactly fourteen seconds I pulled fourteen books about the war off my shelf of current books. There are still some there. There are far too many, apparently because the publishers, with few exceptions, believe that each firm should have at least two books on every possible war "angle." It needs strength to swim to the top of a morass like this.

Cecil Brown's is called "Suez to Singapore." It reads like those tactless broadcasts Mr. Brown made after the "Repulse" sank and tossed him into the money. The book is good reporting, founded on experience, egotism and dislike of certain Britishers. Stanley Johnston was also on a sinking ship, the U.S.S. Lexington, and his "Queen of the Flat-tops" is extremely good reporting and quite as exciting to read.

The same is true of Russell Whelan's "The Flying Tigers" This is Mr. Whelan's story of the seventy American fliers whose 55 planes knocked down 286 Japanese planes — there were many more, but only proven kills were counted. Would you care to know how 1,500 Jap flyers can be killed with a loss of eight Americans, read Mr. Whelan.

Upton Close is one of the few "experts" who bases his radio analyses on a lifetime study of his field. Mr. Close has always been an Orientalist, and this commands respect for his "Behind the Face of Japan." There is the same authentic experience behind Alexander Werth's "The Twilight of France," which is a considered intelligent and very readable account of the years of the locust 1933-40, as they were lived in France. The big and the little traitors are all there, and so is their corrosive philosophy.

Reynolds and Eleanor Packard's "Balcony Empire" is first of a new crop of books on Italy. It is the story of the two great crimes the Italian people never will forgive Mussolini: loss of freedom (the Packards call it democracy), and the sell-out to Germany. There is a gigantic pro-Allied fifth column waiting in Italy, they believe, and they have ideas for its use.

PACAMA

Pacama, Nov. 7—Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Elliott are parents of a son, Harry Matthew, born at the Benedictine Hospital on Thursday, October 29.

Miss Edna Robinson celebrated her 18th birthday on Wednesday, November 4.

Mrs. Alvin Elliott with daughters, Janice and Bernice, son, Alvin Jr., and her sister, Miss Rose Stephano, visited in Kingston last Monday.

OLD FUR—NEW COAT

In these days of conservation, you're taking pride in your possessions, and making many of last year's clothes do. Here's a hint for that old fur coat which doesn't seem smart enough to wear, and yet isn't shabby enough to throw away. Convert the fur into a lining for a wool coat. They are new this year.

Between 1820 and 1930 more than 35,000,000 immigrants entered the United States.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

One of the most interesting and well acted plays in the history of the Kingston High School was the presentation of the four act drama "Strongheart" by members of the high school A. A., on November 18, 1927.

The title role was played by Herrick Schoonmaker, and the others in the cast included Arthur Scott, Harry LeFever, Jr., George Will, Clifford Miller, John Shields, Alfred Hasbrouck, John Watts, John Thompson, Beverly Schmidt

Also Ruth McLaughlin, Margaret Brown, Vivian Hotton, Ann Herzog, Homer Brown, James Halloran, Jay Molyneaux, Burt Van Deusen, Robert Brown, Henry Brigham, Philip Jones, William Jones, Alfred Lyons and John Mohr.

In the days at the turn of the century three of the best known bass-baritone singers in Kingston were William R. Anderson, Richard Dawe and Charles Knight. All three died some years ago.

Mr. Knight for many years was engaged in the metal cap manufacturing business on Pine Grove avenue and later on St. James street. In addition to being a vocalist he was a composer of note and composed some excellent songs. Mr. Dawe during the administration of Mayor Palmer Canfield served as superintendent of the city hall, while Mr. Anderson operated a print shop on West Strand.

All three men in the Gay Nineties appeared in a number of operas presented by local talent, and in addition served as soloists in the choirs of the city's churches.

And speaking of churches I recall that on October 21, 1927, St. John's Church on Albany avenue was dedicated by Bishop William T. Manning, and the Rev. W. P. Kemper was installed as rector of the church.

Older readers will recall the years when St. John's Church stood on Wall street, and when the site was sold and the present Newberry store erected on the former church site, the materials in the old church were removed to Albany avenue and the church re-erected on its present site.

Turning back the city's pages to October 19, 1917, I recall the fine benefit Red Cross concert arranged by Miss Virginia LosKamp, contralto soloist of the Rondout Presbyterian Church. She was assisted that night by Reinald Werrenrath, noted American baritone, who had appeared on the stage of the Metropolitan Theatre in New York, and made Red Seal records for the old Victor phonograph.

Miss LosKamp served as soloist and choir director in the downtown church. I recall that in 1918 she and Miss Elsa Hiltebrant, the church organist, were granted a leave of absence to go overseas and entertain the soldiers of the U. S. Army then in France during the first World War. The two women made a tour of the camps, singing and playing for the soldiers.

WAVE, JR.

Every woman loves a uniform. If your little girl aspires to the Navy, there is a complete outfit for her fashioned after the WAVES' uniform. If she prefers the Army, she'll delight in the new WAAC uniform made for the little soldiers.

Army Group to Confer On Observation Posts

Representatives of the press relations office of the New York Air Defense Wing will be in Kingston tomorrow to confer with Ulster's director of publicity on matters concerning the progress and development of the observation posts from the point of "public relations."

Aside from the physical personnel, represented by "spotters" charged with the duties of observing planes and reporting their course, ceiling flight, and type of craft, there is an Army Press Relations Office for the New York Air Defense Wing whose function is the dissemination of certain news matter as well as informative news of special interest to the "spotters" service.

Ulster county is represented in this civilian defense service by Jack Rabin, who acts in behalf of the aircraft warning service of the First Fighter Command. Mr. Rabin for several years carried on the duties of publicity director for the Legion and has been called "tops" within this field by Kent Hunter, who was public relations director for the New York State Legion Department, and now is a major in the United States Army. It is with Mr. Rabin that the Army representatives, consisting of Corporal John J. Slocum and Corporal S. Kirschner, will confer and check on the accomplishments of his office.

Inquiry Is Begun Into Blast Taking Toll of 9 Lives

Rochester, N. Y. Nov. 7 (AP)—A triple inquiry today sought details of an explosion and fire which razed a small building of the Rochester Fireworks Company, killing eight women and one man.

Ten other employes in the one-story plant in the town of Perinton were burned, and some of them may die, hospital official said.

Federal Bureau of Investigation and army ordnance officials, with the Monroe county sheriff's office, are inquiring into yesterday's blast. Investigators said the explosion resulted when a workman set down or dropped a pan containing powder, causing a friction spark.

Witnesses asserted the explosion was slight, but the ensuing flames trapped the workers without an avenue of escape, Sheriff Albert Skinner said.

The dead are:

Rose Constanzo, 42; Evelyn M. Bigelow, 27; Angelina Mandell, 31; Viola Close, 60; Mary Parsons, 43; Bertha Archambo, 53; Angelina Morabito, 33, and Fred Steeley, 26, all of East Rochester, and Evelyn Ellis, 48, Fairport.

Company officials stated Miss Ellis had been employed only 20 minutes before going on the night shift. The building was the only one used for that shift.

cular job classifications. It will be applied only to groups composed of all the employes in a bargaining unit, in a plant, a company, or an industry, depending upon the circumstances in each case."

It also outlined a hands off policy in manpower problems stating that it would not approve wage increases designed to influence or direct the flow of workers from one industry or one area to another, although it agreed to consider correcting inequalities which might arise from such shifts.

The order stated that a bonus, fee, gift, commission or other form of compensation customarily paid employes can be continued in the future without board approval, subject to certain specific provios which it set forth.

The provisos were: If it is a fixed amount, the total amount paid during the current bonus year must not exceed the total paid an employe for like work during the preceding bonus year; and if it is computed on a percentage, incentive or similar basis, the rate and method of computation may not be changed during the current bonus year unless they yield no more than they did during the preceding year. The employe may receive a greater amount are not changed in the current bonus year.

Ten new regional offices, augmented by the 100-odd field offices of the Labor Department's wage-hour division will handle voluntary applications of employers for wage adjustments. Set up in regional bureaus of the office for emergency management, the ten will be located in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Cleveland, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, and San Francisco.

Appeals to the W.L.B. itself from the regional decisions will be permitted, the order said.

Davis said the board would need about 800 additional employes—200 in Washington and 600 in the field—to handle applications for wage adjustments.

Wicks Total Majority 25,863

Election Day's Returns Set High Mark for Career

Senator Arthur H. Wicks of the 29th District, senior ranking Republican senator and head of the powerful finance committee, who on Tuesday last was reelected for his ninth consecutive term, certainly cannot be cited as an example of the "pitcher that goes too often to the well."

The senator's previous majorities have always been outstanding, but Tuesday last set a high mark for his career, latest returns showing that he carried Ulster, Delaware and Greene counties by a total majority of 25,863. This is upwards of 10,000 better than the figures given out in earlier returns, Delaware county having given him a majority of over 11,000 instead of the 2,500 first reported. Unofficial returns show that he received 11,038 in Delaware, 11,029 in Ulster and 3,796 in Greene.

Senator Wicks best previous record was a majority of 24,424 in the district as a whole.

caused by light passing through so many lenses. To clear this fuzziness, the new camera uses four correcting lenses. It is also built differently than ordinary cameras in numerous details.

The camera uses a new fitting which resembles putting a human eye right in the stomach and rolling the eye so as to look at different parts of the stomach walls. This is done by pushing a button in the gastroscope handle, which moves the mirror set in the stomach end of the tube.

Edward L. Merritt Named Head of Historical Group

Acting in response to numerous inquiries from members regarding plans for the continuance of the work of the Ulster County Historical Society, which has been seriously hampered the past year or so by the protracted illness and the death of its president, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, the executive committee of the society met at the State Museum on Fair street Friday afternoon and named successors to Judge Hasbrouck and to Willis G. Nash, the latter a vice-president at the time of his death.

Edward L. Merritt of Kingston, a trustee of the society and former secretary, was elected president to succeed Judge Hasbrouck.

Andrew J. Snyder of Rosendale was elected a vice-president to succeed Mr. Nash and also was named as a trustee to fill the vacancy in the board caused by Judge Hasbrouck's death.

The committee was in favor of holding the annual literary meeting and luncheon next June, a feature of the work of the society each year up to last June, when because of Judge Hasbrouck's illness it was passed by. There also was some discussion of a proposition to hold a spring pilgrimage in 1943 to the old Bevier house in the town of Marbletown, which some time since was presented to the society as a permanent home. The idea would be to make the members more familiar with this old landmark, which it now owns and which has been in the general charge of Mrs. E. C. Chadbourne of Stone Ridge since its acquisition.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman and during the interim President Merritt will prepare a suitable tribute to the society's late president.

The new president of the society is one of its most valuable members. For several years following the society's reorganization in 1930 Mr. Merritt served as its secretary and since then has been a member of its board of trustees.

He is widely read on matters pertaining to the history and tradition of this section and during recent years has contributed three important and comprehensive papers, which have been published in the yearly proceedings of the society. They were: "Barent Gardenier," read at the meeting in October, 1930; "Colonel Henry Beekman and His Times," given in 1933; "Kingston Academy," read at the June meeting in 1938.

To Present Ambulance To Galeville Field

The Galeville auxiliary landing field will be presented with an ambulance on Armistice Day, November 11, when Dominick Luciano, A. R. Lamura and Edward Acker of the Tuckahoe Construction Company, which recently completed the grading of the enlarged field.

The crash ambulance to be given to the Galeville field is a much needed piece of equipment, Colonel John M. Weikert, commanding officer at Sewart Field, disclosed. Much of the practice take-offs and landings will be made at the Galeville field and this is one of the most dangerous parts of the flight training. Without a crash ambulance at the Galeville field one would have to be dispatched from Steward Field with a consequent delay.

Orange county people under the American Legion sponsorship are donating an ambulance at the same time to the men at Stewart Airfield.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

War Names for War Babies

Baltimore—A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Rossa McGrady during Baltimore's first surprise air raid alert yesterday.

Proud papa McGrady, an aircraft worker, announced his offspring would be named Alert McGrady.

Home Hazards

Denver — Others may complain of the dangers of submarine duty, but William Magnuson doesn't think it so bad.

The 20-year-old navy shipfitter was on a submarine that helped sink three Japanese cruisers in the Solomon Island area. He came through without a scratch.

But en route home a pickpocket lifted $88, all of his money. Then an automobile wreck left him cut and bruised.

Protector

Calexico, Calif.—Mrs. Alden C. Naud thinks her nephew, Leon D. Carver, will come through this war unharmed.

She has sent him a family Bible, printed in 1710, which was carried by Carvers through the French and Indian, Revolutionary, Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars.

All escaped injury.

Above All

Joliet, Ill. — Selwyn Mitchell asked the circuit court to order his estranged wife, Mary, to return the title of his automobile, a jug of anti-freeze for the car, an extra set of car keys and—his sugar rationing card.

Paddy Wagon Pat

Chicago—Unable to obtain an ambulance to take his expectant wife to the hospital, Stanley Napior called a patrol wagon. The stork, however, won the race and Mrs. Napior gave birth to a 7½ pound son in the speeding wagon.

"We'll name him Pat," decided Napior, "because he was born in a Paddy wagon."

Colonial Women's Memos

Highlighting the Colonial Women's League matches at the Central Recreation alleys Wednesday night were two nifty marks collected by Charlotte Lapine of the Mayor's All Stars. Charlotte breezed in with a "heavy" 218 single and finished her night's activities with a 578 series. Her very efficient kegling paced the Stars to three straight wins over the Zeroettes who collected just that in the three-game match. Charlotte's 578 established a new high.

Cys illuminated the Central alleys with the new uniforms of yellow and blue. Watch Monday's Freeman for the photo of this club. Incidentally, some of Alyce Riseley's friends might prompt her to tell just why our photographer had to snap the picture twice before getting an acceptable one for publication. It's reliably reported that Alyce has already received some questions on the incident. . . The new outfits of Cy's seemed to have struck the fuse for this gang never stopped until they had captured both high single and series, 832 and 2385. Helen Smart rolled a neat 186 and Captain Risley added 181, 183 and 162 for a 526 cluster. Bea Coddington furnished a 472 while Ethel Wetzel chimed in with her first 500 of the year. Tillie Clearwater's comeback continued. How about a 200 single, Til?. . . .Kaplans certainly has a spare queen in Bertha Schaller who rolled a nice 464 series. Reta Frederick had a 192 single and a 487 series. Ten strikes, oh, boy, how would that look in one game? Wishing Reta? Captain Helen Broskie complied her strategy to add another 190. This team then continued in the rampage until they captured high single 843 from Cys. Nice going, gals. Keep it up. . . .Sams made their appearance in new green and white uniforms, looking very chick. Late shift, so no news. . . .Chez Emile still on the beam, wins two from Kaplans. Rose Mary Weigand continues her edge on splits, making the 6-10. Vi Buboltz was on the alleys in spirit only. She had seven misses, two splits, one spare for a grand total of 87. Could it be the Army, Mr. Jones?. . . .Captain Winters rolled a 185 and Mary Van Alstyne converted the 4-9 split. . .Nekos, one of the up and coming teams, gave Cys a good tug of war. Marge Mellert does plenty of tricky stuff with her ball. Dot Gross was high with a 448. Cay Brennan certainly can call her shots. Let us in on it, Cay. She had the 8-6, 6-8, 10-4 and 4-9. . . .Joneses, minus little "Eva" (California here I come) Jones, rolled some nice scores. Rose Schatzel had 519 (160-167-192). Up and at 'em, Rose. Evelyn Provenzano just missed the 500 mark by four pins. What's four pins, Ev? Kay Robertson has been running into the nine's of late. Never mind, Kay, those spares look good even if you do have some tough breaks in not getting your deserved strikes. . . . Feye's bowlers sure are pounding the maples. J. Lowery had 168, Mary Marabell 209, one min off high single. Mary Manfro has perfected the corner pins. They give a lot of bowlers plenty of troublle at times. . . .More next week.

"Y" American League

Roland Post, president of the Y. M. C. A. Mercantile Bowling League, continued his great bowling last night at the "Y" alleys in the American League when he blasted out a hefty 534 series and 193 single. Both were high marks in the matches last night.

Post's great bowling sparked the Freeman No. 1 team to two victories over the "Y" couples. Besides the 1943, Post cracked out a 188 and 153. Shultis and Bill DeWitt were high for the losers with 440.

Another pacer in the matches last night was Jordan of the Electrols who posted a 192 and 510 triple. His other marks were 152 and 166. Jordan sparked the Electrols to two triumphs over Ballantines. Low had a high 470 series for the losers.

Wolfersteig of Wonderly's punched out a 497 triple on scores of 161, 169 and 167, as that team took two games from the Pontiacs. Dunham of the losers registered high single in the match with his 190. Emil Boessneck posted high series for the club with his 446.

Electrol League Results

Tony Casciaro and Mike Provenzano highlighted the Electrol League bowling matches at the Central Recreation alleys last night. Casciaro, bowling with the Maintenance team, carved himself a sensational 255 single game while Provenzano blasted a 577 series. Provenzano bowls with the Test Lab.

Casciaro, who has been picking up quite a few acceptable scores of late, continued his fine kegling last night with that 255 single game and a three-game cluster of 564 as the Maintenence team won three games from the Office representatives. Casciaro's other scores were 162 and 147. Stevenson had a 511 triples for the winners Simmons' 468 was high for the losers.

Meanwhile, Provenzano's high-powered triple of 577 on scores of 190, 182 and 205, sparked the Test Lab to three straight over the Automatics. Neer had a 195 single and 499 series for the losing club.

The Dispatch keglers took two from the Turrets as J. Murphy poured out a 193 single and 494 triple to pace the winners. M. Mann had a 491. W. Robinson's 466 triple was tops for the turrets.

In the final match the Accounters captured two decisions from the Apprentices. R. Clark's 179 single game and 499 triple paced the winners. Bob Vincent hit 215 for the losers and wound-up with a 499.

Robinson Winner Over Dellicurti; Jannazzo Is Next

Robbie's Streak Runs to 38 Straight as Professional; 10,349 Fans Witness Bout

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Having come out of his second invasion of the middleweight division with an easy victory over Vic Dellicurti, welterweight Ray Robinson agreed today to two more fights this year—one in his own class and one in 160-pound competition.

The first of these will be December 1, a return match against Izzy Jannazzo of Brooklyn, who is recognized in Maryland as the world welterweight champion. It will be a part of the annual Cleveland Christmas Fund boxing show. Robinson outpointed Jannazzo recently in Philadelphia.

The other will be in Philadelphia, December 14, probably against Jose Basora, a sharp punching Puerto Rican middleweight.

Robinson ran his winning streak to 127 fights, the last 38 as a professional, last night when he took a one-sided decision from Dellicurti, a fellow New Yorker, before 10,349 customers at Madison Square Garden.

The Harlem hammer, who weighed 144½ to Dellicurti's 153¾, punched his opponent around the ring in the early rounds and coasted the rest of the way.

Recreations List Players For 1942-43 Cage Season; Seven Will Be Retained

Pro Club Opens Campaign November 18 Here; Gershon May Be Signed

With only 11 days remaining before Manager "Turk" Karam brings his present edition of the 1942-43 Kingston Recreation basketball team to the municipal auditorium to open another professional court campaign, the local pilot is busy talking over details with his expected Kingston starters while watching a group of veteran cagers drill in New York city.

At the present time the Recreations plan to open the new basketball season at the Broadway boards Wednesday night, November 18. One of the top-flight metropolitan teams may be the opponent for the Recs in the opening tussle. Karam, with negotiations under way with the Philadelphia Sphas, may bring that American League club here for the Thanksgiving night game.

10 Players Under Eye

Manager Karam, who bossed the local team last year for a spell after Jim McNally's reign, and who has appeared at the municipal stadium twice with the Brooklyn Dodger Rookies, has about 10 prospective players under his guidance at this writing. The squad was scheduled to play St. Francis last night in New York.

Karam, in communications with the Recreation basketball committee here, announces that he has Nick Shaback, a big favorite here last season; "Porky" Rosen, Hagen Anderson, another 1941-42 star; Jack McGuirk, last year's center and forward; Ace Goldstein, Howie Bollerman, Irv Terjesen, former New York University high scorer; Jim Naughton, Sammy Kaplan and Herb Gershon. Gershon was last year's American League top scorer and his presence should prove to Kingston fans that this year's Recs will be an offensive more than a defensive team.

Favorites May Return

With the announcement that Shaback, Anderson, McGuirk and Kaplan may be with the Recs again this year, local fans are assured of seeing some of the cagers who helped the Recs to get back in the professional limelight again as a pro town. When Anderson was released last year after that big "house-cleaning" local fans were sorry to see him go as he always played one of the hardest games a pro cager ever played on the local boards.

Naughton, a newcomer to these parts, formerly played with the great Ohrbachs. Gershon, while competing with the Recreations this year, if he is finally selected, will divide his duties here and with the Grumman Bombers of Long Island.

By the time the opening game is slated for the auditorium a week from this coming Wednesday, Manager Karam will have trimmed the squad down to seven players. The starting line-up for the Recs and the probable opponent for the first game, may be announced some time next week.

Reserve Seats

The Recreation management has announced that all reserved ticket holders of last year will be given the first consideration of retaining them for the coming year. Reservations must be completed by Monday, November 16, two days before the first 1942-43 pro basketball clash.

Packers and Rams Give Gridiron Fans Warning

Poor Defensive Clubs Are Expected to Fill Air With Passes; Bears Oppose Dodgers

By SID FEDER

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—This is just a friendly tip to the good citizens of Cleveland to "head for the hills, men," when the Greenbay Packers parade against the Cleveland Rams on tomorrow's National Professional Football League program.

This is not to suggest that the boys will try any rough stuff on the cash customers during the proceedings, but the respective defensive records of the ponderous Packers and the rambunctious Rams indicate that the air's going to be full of footballs and the gladiators are going to be doing more point-making than point-stopping when these two outfits say "howdy."

For on the basis of gold figures so far through the campaign, it appears these two clubs have about as much idea of defense as a couple of Tony Galento's.

The Cleveland-Green Bay fuss may not headline the league's full weekly card, but it should uncork a good portion of the fire crackers, especially if the Packers' 55 points in their game last week is any indication.

Cards vs. Redskins

As for the "championship" aspects of the program, the chief feature appears to be whether Jimmy Conzelman's Chicago Cardinals, can interrupt the Washington Redskins' rhumba toward the Eastern Division title.

The unbeaten Chicago Bears who've been running wild over the western half up to now, shouldn't have any too much trouble in Brooklyn against the Dodgers, and the rest of the schedule—which finds Pitsburgh at Detroit and New York at Philadelphia—is about a dime-a-dozen on the open market.

But, when the Packers and the Rams turn loose, anything is likely to happen. Except for Detroit and Philadelphia—who are so far behind in their respective sections that they look like they're traveling in a second section of the train—these two teams show the worst defensive records in the league. Each has had 123 points scored against it, more than any other outfit except for Detroit and Philly. The Rams have been hit for 2,353 yards in eight games.

Rose Bowl Possibilities Are Named; Georgia Is Mentioned With U.C.L.A.

St. Mary's Pre-Flights and Washington State Also May Be West Coast Selection

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP)—Last week, before the 1943 Rose Bowl football game seemed a certainty, Los Angeles sports writers were pounding out rhapsodies on their word pianos about Georgia's Frankie Sinkwich and what a natural a Georgia-U. C. L. A. post season game would be.

Now that the Army is willing to sanction the Pasadena game New Year's Day, Georgia's Bulldogs and the University of California at Los Angeles Bruins still are the "peepul's choice" here, but by November 28 Georgia Tech's engineers might be the standout southern team and U. C. L. A. just another ball club.

If transportation problems can be overcome the Pacific coast conference representative would like to pluck the outstanding college team out of the usual post-season scramble among the various bowl managements, but if there is going to be any difficulty in getting the team of its choice here there is a service eleven close by that would provide all the competition, probably more, than the Coast Conference winner could handle.

St. Mary's pre-flights from the hills of Moraga, Calif., have a galaxy of gridiron greats with marked western drawing power, among them such all-America performers as Stanford's Frankie Albert and Bobby Grayson, California's Vic Bottari, Northwestern's Fred Vanzo and others. The flying cadets pasted an 18-7 beating on U. C. L. A. early in the season, figure they could do it again, and the Uclans are just as certain they could reverse the score. That game would pack the 80,000-capacity Rose Bowl.

U. C. L. A. still must prove it is the standout team on the Pacific coast. Its games against Oregon this week and Washington, Nov. 21 should settle the issue, and right after the Washington game the Bruins, if they are still undefeated in Conference play, are going to get the wires busy and try to entice a standout opponent here before the Orange and Sugar Bowls beat them to the punch. Time—the lateness of the football season here—always has been against the coast champions. It will be December 12 before the Bruins finish their schedule against the University of Southern California.

If U. C. L. A. stubs its toe anywhere along the line Washington State's Cougars look like the Pacific titleholder. Coach Babe Hollingberry's team has lost only one game and doesn't have to meet U. C. L. A., but the Cougars would have to get by their traditional rival, the University of Washington, November 28.

American Athens Comes to Light

Civilization in Tula Was Great, Something Happened Then

Wide World Features

Mexico City — In Tula the magnificent, center of life and arts and learning, Tula with its great temples and palaces, ruled a white god whose wisdom was unbounded—

Great was the civilization that flourished in Tula. Then something happened—something in a lost chapter of American history, hundreds of years before the arrival of the Spaniards. A curtain was drawn on Tula, a curtain which scientists believe finally they are raising.

They believe that they have found Tula again and that the treasures they are digging out of its buried ruins will cast new and important light on America prior to the conquest.

The work is being done by archaeologists of the Mexican National Institute of Anthropology and History. Huge stone warriors 15 feet high, temples, stadiums and pyramids have come to light. In certain instances there is a similarity of idea to the Egyptian. There is a marked likeness to the Mayan.

Relatively near Tula lies another aged metropolis. From its mounds also have come pyramids, temples and fortresses. If the real Tula is at the new diggings then this other metropolis—Teotihuacan—is probably much older even than Tula.

Tula flourished between the ninth and eleventh centuries. Teotihuacan may, the archaeologists say, date from before and even long before the Christian era.

Teotihuacan is 32 miles from Mexico City. The present diggings are 18 miles farther, in a straight line, in the state of Hidalgo.

About the ninth century a less civilized but more warlike people descended from the north, conquered and mixed with this race. From the mixture came the Toltecs and from somewhere came a great and wise ruler. He was Ce Acatl Topiltzin Quetzalcoatl, "god of the air," whose symbol was a plumed serpent.

The Toltecs built a great metropolis, Tula, and for at least two centuries it flourished. Then something happened. The curtain was drawn.

As far back as 1879 the French explorer Desire Charnay uncovered interesting buildings at the site of the present new diggings, but there was not enough to convince science that he had hit upon the real Tula.

Recent investigations, however, have produced such sensational results that the Institute believes it has really found Tula. The region all about is sprinkled with mounds, large and small, that are believed to cover ancient structures.

Charney himself had uncovered two great palaces. The Institute has uncovered two more palaces and many details of architecture that are termed priceless.

Decorations in the palaces and temples are dominated by finely sculptured figures of the plumed serpent, from which emerge a human head of Quetzalcoatl. Eagles, jaguars and "atlases"—that is, human male figures used as supports—have been unearthed in numbers.

"Tula," said the Institute's archaeologist Vladimiro Rosado Ojeda in a recent summary of the work, "can be said to have been the Athens of its time and place, radiating its civilization to distant parts, so that its fame was fully merited."

Do You Want to Raise Your Son to Be a Hero?

(Wide World Features)

Do you want your child to be a hero, to face bravely the hazards and hardships of war?

Here's a simple prescription by Dr. Ernest G. Osborne, head of early childhood education at Teachers College, Columbia University:

1. Be brave yourself.
2. Give your children a wartime job — such as collecting scrap—and let them know they're helping both you and the war effort.
3. Make them feel emotionally secure, that mother and father love them that they're part of the family.

Follow these rules, says Dr. Osborne, and you'll find that "war can be a blessing in disguise for children." They will come out of it stronger and more self-reliant.

"It is almost miraculous the way a child picks up an adult's attitude," he says. "If you face war bravely, children — whether infants or school-age youngsters—will do likewise. If you're timid and fearful, they'll be the same way."

He cites instances from blitzed Britain. Older children who cared for younger children and sisters, or who escorted the aged and ill to safety, enjoyed the sense of importance it gave them. They forgot all about the danger of falling bombs — and pulled through the most violent raids with a stronger morale.

Excluding unusually sensitive children, he says, boys and girls upset by war and showing recurrent fears of its effects felt insecure at home, not fully loved or appreciated by their parents.

Children sure of their parents' love who were told the whole truth when raid sirens rang or father marched off to war, continued to live normally and happily.

Bus Hearing Before Public Service Monday

"We are going before the state public service commission Monday," said Alderman Victor Roth of the Twelfth ward, this morning when questioned as to what further steps had been taken to inaugurate a proposed extension of the present bus route through the Forsyth Park area.

Alderman Roth said that he expected to attend the hearing in Albany Monday and that the city would also be represented by Corporation Counsel Joseph H. Forman. The bus line is expected to be represented by Thomas Gadd and Attorney John M. Cashin.

Alderman Roth some time ago introduced a petition signed by many residents of the Twelfth ward asking that the council approve of the extension of bus service in that ward.

The bus committee of the council held a public hearing and later at a council session the aldermen approved the petition which was filed with the public service commission by Corporation Counsel Forman.

At the last hearing before the state board the bus line was given a certain length of time to inaugurate the service, which time has expired.

Delightful Program at Rondout Presbyterian

Friday evening an entertainment of mirth, music and magic was presented by the young folks of the Rondout Presbyterian Sunday school at a party held in the chapel of the church. Following the program games were played and refreshments served.

The program, with Fred L. Van Deusen, well known local magician, as master of ceremonies, opened with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and the pledge of allegiance to the flag led by Henry Peyer and Donald Wolff.

The Doherty trio, composed of the Rev. D. L. Doherty, pastor of the church, and his two daughters, Betty and Anna Jean, rendered violin and piano selections, and were followed by Bernice Lowe in a tap dance.

Miss Anna A. Van Deusen gave a pleasing piano solo, which was followed by Phyllis Wolff, Mary Bennett, Audrey Peck, Addie Krom, Ruth Stokes and Alberta Stokes and Gladys Karoe.

Norma Manos also rendered a piano selection, and a sketch was presented by James McClenahan, Joseph Banks and Kenneth Lowe.

The program closed with several magical illusions by Mr. Van Deusen.

Red Anniversary Brings World to Due Appreciation

rule by the German conqueror would mean. Russia dropped out of the war. The second front of that day had collapsed. In the spring of 1918 the Kaiser and Hindenburg, "because of the absence of a second front in Europe"—to borrow the phrase Stalin applied to 1942—almost won the war.

What a difference in the 25-year-old Soviet Russia of 1942! In Stalin's speech and in his order of the day there is assurance repeated many times that Russia, now bearing the brunt, is in the war against "that cannibal Hitler" to the end. If there is a note of reproach in the long passage on the absence of a second front, if there is the implication that Rommel's defeat is not enough—the aside remark that only 15 Axis divisions are contained in Egypt as against 240 in Russia—there is the steadfastness and power of the "Anglo-Soviet-American coalition" and in victory.

Not only will there be a second front, says Stalin, because the Allies know that without it things "may end badly for all freedom loving peoples," but "the day is not far off when the enemy will feel the force of new blows of the Red army."

Stalin Realized Contrast

The contrast between 1917 and 1942 must have been vivid in Stalin's mind as he spoke, although he referred to those ten days that shook the world a quarter century ago merely in a passing phrase. Few men alive can be so conscious of the difference. He alone of the revolutionary titans survives. Lenin is enshrined in Moscow. Trotsky's ashes rest in faraway Mexico, which saw the tragic end in exile of his stormy career. Kamenev, Rykov, Zinoviev and Bucharin all have been "purged." Other political leaders of present day Russia were lesser figures in 1917. Today's military heroes, Timoshenko, Zhukov and the others, were virtually unknown.

There are some parallels between the state of World War in 1917 and today. Then as now German armies held sway across nearly the entire breadth of Europe. The war was in its fourth year and the rapid approach of the climax was apparent to all. The tremendous military and productive potential of the United States was just beginning to be felt. But France was still valiantly in the field, Japan and Italy were in the Allied camp, although the former was a lukewarm and troublesome comrade and Italy was proving unable to stand alone, as she is today.

Two mighty facts offset those points of difference today. One is the fact that the United States already has mobilized more power in men and weapons than we had ready even at the end in 1918 and that the American war machine has just begun to roll. The other is that Russia, instead of abandoning the second front as in 1917, is holding the first front while her allies prepare for the second, holding it with a heroism that President Roosevelt hails as incomparable.

Supreme Court Convenes Monday

Grand and Trial Jury Both in Attendance This Term

The November trial term of Supreme Court will be convened Monday morning at 11 o'clock when jurors will be examined and those presenting legal excuses, excused for the term. There is both ance at this term. At 2 o'clock a grand and trial jury in attend- the day calendar will be taken up.

At the September term of Supreme court held by Justice Harry E. Schirick there were but two cases which were actually tried and went to the jury. Thirty-nine cases in all, were disposed of by means of settlements or adjustments during the term, thus removing from the calendar an exceptionally large number of cases. Eighteen were stricken off the calendar for various reasons and six were discontinued. The large number of actions disposed of at the last term with but two cases actually tried and submitted to the jury, probably stands as a record in the history of the Supreme court in this county.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home

BY John Barclay

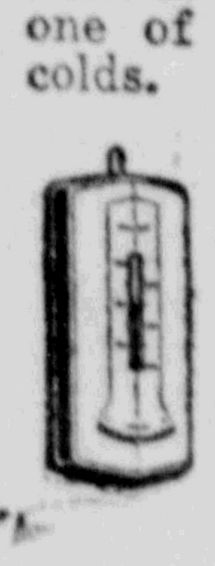
AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

Automatic Operation of Dampers By Means of a Thermostat

It is a simple matter to automatically control your heating plant by installing a thermostat. A thermostat will automatically operate the dampers in such a way to supply even, steady heat upstairs between firing periods. It eliminates constant trips to the cellar for the manual regulation of dampers.

A good thermostat may be purchased today at small cost. In fact, in a short period of time it will pay for itself by saving fuel that was previously wasted by over-heating of the house. Authorities claim that for every degree above 70 that we heat our home, 1½% more fuel is consumed. If we heat our home up to 78 degrees, 12% more coal is used. If the automatic operation of the thermostat is governed by changes in room temperature it will stop this overheating and thereby save on coal consumption.

Medical men tell us that during the winter 50% of illness is caused by colds. They further state that overheating is one of the greatest causes of colds.



It will pay you to get more information on thermostatic damper controls. Your home will be evenly heated at all times without constant trips to the cellar and you will save on your coal bill. (6)

Flynn Is Confident Of His Release

Photographer Says Flynn Told of 'Shakedown'

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP)—Errol Flynn, voicing confidence in his ultimate complete vindication, today finds himself facing trial November 23 on charges of the statutory rape of two minor girls as his newest film opened last night at two major theatres here and in Hollywood, and on the whole received a good reception by critics and public.

The dashing actor was soberfaced, almost grim yesterday when he heard himself bound over to superior court on charges of violating Peggy La Rue Satterlee, Hollywood singer and dancer on a yacht cruise when she was 15, and Betty Hansen, 17, formerly of Lincoln, Neb., at a party in a fashionable Bel-Air residence. Under California law a sex act with a minor girl is statutory rape, whether or not is is forcible.

After the court, following his preliminary hearing, ordered him held for trial, Flynn said he felt sure of his vindication.

"The district attorney has had the ball so far," he said in a statement. "When I get it the picture will change . . . I have complete confidence in the essential fairmindedness of the America majority."

Flynn did not take the stand during the hearing, his attorney, Jerry Giesler, noted specialist in criminal law, confining himself to searching cross-examination of the two girls. The actor remains at liberty under $1,000 bond.

As the hearing neared a close, the mention of an alleged shakedown against the actor was injected into the testimony when Peter Stackpole, amagazine photographer, took the stand. He took pictures on the cruise in August, 1941, when Miss Satterlee asserts she was attacked.

Questioned about a meeting with the actor after the voyage, Stackpole said:

"I believe Flynn said he was involved in what he termed a shakedown. I didn't question him. He simply said he was getting involved in a shakedown which involved Miss Satterlee."

Stackpole said he believed the amount involved was $5,000.

Flynn's picture which opened last night is "Gentleman Jim," based on the life of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion. The morning papers reviewed the film without reference to the case. One critic said he played the role of Corbett "with real sincerity" and another commented that he was "suitable to the delineation in a majority of respects, which makes his performance acceptable."

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 6—A special farm labor committee to correlate efforts in trying to meet the farm labor shortage has been appointed today by C. C. DuMond of Ulster Park, chairman of the New York State Agricultural Defense Committee. Those named to serve on the committee include Dr. T. N. Hurd and S. R. Shapley of Ithaca of the Extension Service, State College of Agriculture; W. J. Birdsall of Albany, State Department of Agriculture and Markets; W. Mr. DuMond says that this committee will be advisory to the State Agricultural Defense Committee and that its job will be to consider the many plans and proposals for relieving the farm labor shortage. He said, "In fact the committee will act as a clearing house and make recommendations to the Agricultural Defense Committee. The Agricultural Defense Committee will continue its established policy of recommending lines of action to the State War Council and other agencies concerned with the manpower problem on farms."

The State Agricultural Defense Committee is composed of representatives of the following statewide farm organization: Grange, Farm Bureau, Home Bureau, Horticultural Society, Vegetable Growers Association, G. L. F., Dairymen's League, Poultry Council and 4-H Federation and the farmer chairmen of state committees on Agricultural Conservation, Soil Conservation, Production Credit and Land Use Planning.

A Mother's Request

I'll be careful with the cocoa, the
coffee and the tea,
And when it comes to gas and
tires Uncle Sam can count on me;
I'll save my paper and my scraps
for bullets to those pesky Japs,
While as for rationed sugar cards
I'll only think them fun,
If Uncle Sam some future day
just sends me back my son.
Mrs. Pearl Jackson.

Little Mary was left to fix the lunch, and when her mother returned with a friend, she observed that Mary had the tea strained.

Mother—Did you find the lost strainer, dear? (as they were eating).

Little Mary—No, mother, I used the fly swatter.

This tire and gasoline shortage is going to make a lot of pet bunions cry to high heaven.

The three major menaces on our highways are listed as drunken driving, uncontrolled thumbing, and indiscriminate spooning—in other words, hic, hike and hug.

Education. Never be ashamed to own that you have been in the wrong. All the mistakes that we make seem to be a necessary part of our education. To admit that you have erred is to say indirectly to your fellows that you are wiser today than yesterday.

The customer couldn't see eye-to-eye with the taxicab driver on the matter of fare. Finally he said in exasperation.

Customer—See here, I haven't been riding in cabs for ten years for nothing.

Driver—No, but I'll bet you've been trying to.

White-walled Charm

Once she had not many friends:
See how time can make amends.
Lovers seldom trod her ground;
See how fortune's wheel turns
round.
Now, from shortly after dawn
Suitors troop across her lawn,
Lovers gather by the score,
Crowd each other from her door.
True, she wears the same old face,
True, her form has no new grace;
But her car has four new tires—
What every man, at heart, desires.
—Elijah L. Jacobs.

We rather like the story about the west side doctor in Chicago who came out to find his car sitting on the wheel hubs, sans tires. Inside, he found a note: "Dear doctor: Enclosed is $100. You can get new tires; we can't.

It doesn't require a musical education to play dumb bell.

A local man's idea of double bad luck is finding his automobile with a flat tire and a parking tag on it.

Father—Didn't you promise me to be a good boy?

Son—Yes, father.

Father—And didn't I promise you a thrashing if you weren't?

Son—Yes, father, but as I've broken my promise you needn't keep yours.

Safer

Oh, stop and let the train go by
It hardly takes a minute;
Your car then starts again intact,
And what is more, you're in it.

Friend—Have you forgotten that five dollars I loaned you six weeks ago?

Man—Not yet, give me time.

The jokes about the rubber shortage seem to be wearing out faster than the tires.

State May Drop Regents Exams During War

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 6(AP)—The possibility of dropping state regents examinations in high school subjects as part of the wartime streamlining of secondary school programs is being considered by the New York association of deans and other guidance personnel.

"There is no longer time to master all the facts of history, or read all classics," Harry J. Linton, assistant schools superintendent at Schenectady, declared yesterday in a plea for streamlining high school subjects to fit students for wartime jobs, both civilian and military.

"Quite possibly the regents examinations should be dropped in some or possibly all high school subjects for the duration," he said at the opening of the association's three-day meeting.

Courses must make room "for information regarding the armed forces, for discussion of war aims and for the following day by day of the war's progress," he said.

To effect this program, school hours may have to be lengthened and evening sessions held, he added.

Veterans Favor Bells On Thanksgiving Day

Chicago, Nov. 6 (AP)—The Illinois Veterans of Foreign Wars urge the nation to observe Thanksgiving by ringing bells—"to remind people that it is a time of thanksgiving to God for the blessings of freedom and prosperity that we enjoy."

Asserting that there was "no outward expression of Thanksgiving Day," State Commander Nelson R. Knudsen said the organization was making a nation-wide appeal for a more spiritual observance of the holiday. The group suggests ringing of bells in churches, schools and railroad engines.

"We observe Armistice Day with a moment of facing east in salute while whistles blow," Knudsen said, "and Christmas carols remind us of yuletide. Bell ringing will remind us to pray on Thanksgiving Day and to take anew the pledge that we will give all that liberty may live."

'Yank' Levy Tells Why Nazis Can't Take Stalingrad

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Wide World Features Writer

Washington — The battle of Stalingrad is the biggest battle ever fought in a large city—a multiple series of terrific struggles from street to street, from house to house, from roof to cellar to sewer.

American soldiers probably will have to do some fighting of this kind when the drive against the Nazis gets going on the continent.

Apart from the courage of the Russian defenders, there are two main reasons given by military men for the prolonged Stalingrad resistance against wave after wave of Hitler's best legions:

The Reds' knowledge of guerilla tactics and the advantage possessed by defenders in a city battle.

Bert "Yank" Levy, former Cleveland boy and soldier of fortune who is teaching the British Home Guard how to defend towns, says that in a city prepared against attack the advantage in street fighting is invariably with the defenders, who are familiar with the battleground.

Levy, who fought with the International Brigade against Franco in Spain, points out that the man who knows a neighborhood can always keep the enemy guessing. If you know your sewer system thoroughly you may be able to transport troops behind the enemy lines and surprise him.

In his book on guerilla warfare (published by Penguin Books, Inc., and the Infantry Journal), Levy writes that Nazi tanks and dive bombers are of little value in street fighting. A tank might smash through flimsy cottages but cannot plow over or under rows of houses.

In street fighting, bombs from invading aircraft are likely to harm invading troops as much as defenders. A tank has to keep to comparatively narrow streets, where an over-turned streetcar or a couple of earth-filled trucks may stop it. Furthermore, says Levy, tanks can be fought effectively by anti-tank grenades flung from roofs or windows.

Levy gives these tips on the strategy of tough street fighting and house to house combat:

"While you stay in buildings you are protected but as soon as you go out on the open street you are at the mercy of machine gun fire. Get your men across the street in the night time if you can. If you can't wait provide them with a smoke screen.

"Do not rush the door of an enemy-occupied building. And be sure to spring any booby trap before you enter. Two Tommy machine gunners and one grenadier should approach under the covering fire of their comrades. Then, from a prone position alongside the door the grenadier flings in a grenade and, just to make sure, pitches in another.

"Then one Tommy gunner fires from just outside the door across and up into the far corner of the ceiling, covering about one-quarter of the ceiling with his shots. The second machine gunner dashes for the corner of the room under the peppered part of the ceiling and sweeps the rest of the ceiling while the other Tommy gunner is reloading. By that time any Nazi upstairs is either dead or dancing hard.

"One man makes for the stairway covered by bullets of the others shooting ahead of him. At the same time two or three men can enter the house and begin to 'mouse hole' into the next room from the secured ground floor while the others are securing the upper floors. Then they 'mouse hole' through the upper rooms."

Mouse holing, says Levy, is simple work with a pick or a crowbar. You first make a small hole, toss a grenade through it, enlarge the hole and toss a second through it from inside one room or building to the next, thus making reasonably sure of disposing of everybody in the adjoining rooms.

Large-scale rationing of food products has been made effective in Bermuda, says the Department of Commerce.

Army Group to Confer On Observation Posts

Representatives of the press relations office of the New York Air Defense Wing will be in Kingston tomorrow to confer with Ulster's director of publicity on matters concerning the progress and development of the observation posts from the point of "public relations."

Aside from the physical personnel, represented by "spotters" charged with the duties of observing planes and reporting their course, ceiling flight, and type of craft, there is an Army Press Relations Office for the New York Air Defense Wing whose function is the dissemination of certain news matter as well as informative news of special interest to the "spotters" service.

Ulster county is represented in this civilian defense service by Jack Rabin, who acts in behalf of the aircraft warning service of the First Fighter Command. Mr. Rabin for several years carried on the duties of publicity director for the Legion and has been called "tops" within this field by Kent Hunter, who was public relations director for the New York State Legion Department, and now is a major in the United States Army. It is with Mr. Rabin that the Army representatives, consisting of Corporal John J. Slocum and Corporal S. Kirschner, will confer and check on the accomplishments of his office.

Inquiry Is Begun Into Blast Taking Toll of 9 Lives

Rochester, N. Y. Nov. 7 (AP)—A triple inquiry today sought details of an explosion and fire which razed a small building of the Rochester Fireworks Company, killing eight women and one man.

Ten other employes in the one-story plant in the town of Perinton were burned, and some of them may die, hospital official said.

Federal Bureau of Investigation and army ordnance officials, with the Monroe county sheriff's office, are inquiring into yesterday's blast. Investigators said the explosion resulted when a workman set down or dropped a pan containing powder, causing a friction spark.

Witnesses asserted the explosion was slight, but the ensuing flames trapped the workers without an avenue of escape, Sheriff Albert Skinner said.

The dead are:

Rose Constanzo, 42; Evelyn M. Bigelow, 27; Angelina Mandell, 31; Viola Close, 60; Mary Parsons, 43; Bertha Archambo, 53; Angelina Morabito, 33, and Fred Steeley, 26, all of East Rochester, and Evelyn Ellis, 48, Fairport.

Company officials stated Miss Ellis had been employed only 20 minutes before going on the night shift. The building was the only one used for that shift.

cular job classifications. It will be applied only to groups composed of all the employes in a bargaining unit, in a plant, a company, or an industry, depending upon the circumstances in each case."

It also outlined a hands off policy in manpower problems stating that it would not approve wage increases designed to influence or direct the flow of workers from one industry or one area to another, although it agreed to consider correcting inequalities which might arise from such shifts.

The order stated that a bonus, fee, gift, commission or other form of compensation customarily paid employes can be continued in the future without board approval, subject to certain specific provios which it set forth.

The provisos were: If it is a fixed amount, the total amount paid during the current bonus year must not exceed the total paid an employe for like work during the preceding bonus year; and if it is computed on a percentage, incentive or similar basis, the rate and method of computation may not be changed during the current bonus year unless they yield no more than they did during the preceding year. The employe may receive a greater amount are not changed in the current bonus year.

Ten new regional offices, augmented by the 100-odd field offices of the Labor Department's wage-hour division will handle voluntary applications of employers for wage adjustments. Set up in regional bureaus of the office for emergency management, the ten will be located in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Kansas City, Cleveland, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, and San Francisco.

Appeals to the W.L.B. itself from the regional decisions will be permitted, the order said.

Davis said the board would need about 800 additional employes—200 in Washington and 600 in the field—to handle applications for wage adjustments.

National Townsend Plan Directors to Speak Here

Russell Saville of Chicago, national director of the Townsend Movement and chairman of the Townsend Legislative Bureau of Washington, will be guest speaker at a combined rally of the Townsend clubs of southeast New York, under the auspices of the Kingston Townsend club No. 1. It will be held at Mechanics' Hall, 14 Henry street, Wednesday evening, November 11, at 8 o'clock.

The local club's annual chicken supper and bazaar will precede the rally at 6 o'clock.

Mr. Saville will speak on the status of legislation in Washington, and the progress of the Townsend Plan. Paul Chase, national representative for New York state will accompany Mr. Saville, and speak briefly. At Wednesday evening's session the club's new service flag will be dedicated to its five members now in active service. All members and the public are cordially invited to attend.

Wicks Total Majority 25,863

Election Day's Returns Set High Mark for Career

Senator Arthur H. Wicks of the 29th District, senior ranking Republican senator and head of the powerful finance committee, who on Tuesday last was reelected for his ninth consecutive term, certainly cannot be cited as an example of the "pitcher that goes too often to the well."

The senator's previous majorities have always been outstanding, but Tuesday last set a high mark for his career, latest returns showing that he carried Ulster, Delaware and Greene counties by a total majority of 25,863. This is upwards of 10,000 better than the figures given out in earlier returns, Delaware county having given him a majority of over 11,000 instead of the 2,500 first reported. Unofficial returns show that he received 11,038 in Delaware, 11,029 in Ulster and 3,786 in Greene.

Senator Wicks best previous record was a majority of 24,424 in the district as a whole.

caused by light passing through so many lenses. To clear this fuzziness, the new camera uses four correcting lenses. It is also built differently than ordinary cameras in numerous details.

The camera uses a new fitting which resembles putting a human eye right in the stomach and rolling the eye so as to look at different parts of the stomach walls. This is done by pushing a button in the gastroscope handle, which moves the mirror set in the stomach end of the tube.

Edward L. Merritt Named Head of Historical Group

Acting in response to numerous inquiries from members regarding plans for the continuance of the work of the Ulster County Historical Society, which has been seriously hampered the past year or so by the protracted illness and the death of its president, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, the executive committee of the society met at the State Museum on Fair street Friday afternoon and named successors to Judge Hasbrouck and to Willis G. Nash, the latter a vice-president at the time of his death.

Edward L. Merritt of Kingston, a trustee of the society and former secretary, was elected president to succeed Judge Hasbrouck.

Andrew J. Snyder of Rosendale was elected a vice-president to succeed Mr. Nash and also was named as a trustee to fill the vacancy in the board caused by Judge Hasbrouck's death.

The committee was in favor of holding the annual literary meeting and luncheon next June, a feature of the work of the society each year up to last June, when because of Judge Hasbrouck's illness it was passed by. There also was some discussion of a proposition to hold a spring pilgrimage in 1943 to the old Bevier house in the town of Marbletown, which some time since was presented to the society as a permanent home. The idea would be to make the members more familiar with this old landmark, which it now owns and which has been in the general charge of Mrs. F. C. Chadbourne of Stone Ridge since its acquisition.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chairman and during the interim President Merritt will prepare a suitable tribute to the society's late president.

The new president of the society is one of its most valuable members. For several years following the society's reorganization in 1930 Mr. Merritt served as its secretary and since then has been a member of its board of trustees.

He is widely read on matters pertaining to the history and tradition of this section and during recent years has contributed three important and comprehensive papers, which have been published in the yearly proceedings of the society. They were: "Barent Gardenier," read at the meeting in October, 1930; "Colonel Henry Beekman and His Times," given in 1933; "Kingston Academy," read at the June meeting in 1938.

To Present Ambulance To Galeville Field

The Galeville auxiliary landing field will be presented with an ambulance on Armistice Day, November 11, when Dominick Luciano, A. R. Lamura and Edward Acker of the Tuckahoe Construction Company, which recently completed the grading of the enlarged field.

The crash ambulance to be given to the Galeville field is a much needed piece of equipment, Colonel John M. Weikert, commanding officer at Sewart Field, disclosed. Much of the practice take-offs and landings will be made at the Galeville field and this is one of the most dangerous parts of the flight training. Without a crash ambulance at the Galeville field one would have to be dispatched from Steward Field with a consequent delay.

Orange county people under the American Legion sponsorship are donating an ambulance at the same time to the men at Stewart Airfield.

Red Cross Kit Bag Fund Reaches Half Way Mark

The Ulster County Chapter American Red Cross appeal for the "Kit Bag Fund" has achieved a total of $1,802.98, about half the necessary amount, it was announced today by the local Red Cross office.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

War Names for War Babies

Baltimore—A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Rossa McGrady during Baltimore's first surprise air raid alert yesterday.

Proud papa McGrady, an aircraft worker, announced his offspring would be named Alert McGrady.

Home Hazards

Denver—Others may complain of the dangers of submarine duty, but William Magnuson doesn't think it so bad.

The 20-year-old navy shipfitter was on a submarine that helped sink three Japanese cruisers in the Solomon Island area. He came through without a scratch.

But en route home a pickpocket lifted $88, all of his money. Then an automobile wreck left him cut and bruised.

Protector

Calexico, Calif.—Mrs. Alden C. Naud thinks her nephew, Leon D. Carver, will come through this war unharmed.

She has sent him a family Bible, printed in 1710, which was carried by Carvers through the French and Indian, Revolutionary, Civil, Spanish-American and World Wars.

All escaped injury.

Above All

Joliet, Ill. — Selwyn Mitchell asked the circuit court to order his estranged wife, Mary, to return the title of his automobile, a jug of anti-freeze for the car, an extra set of car keys and—his sugar rationing card.

Paddy Wagon Pat

Chicago—Unable to obtain an ambulance to take his expectant wife to the hospital, Stanley Napior called a patrol wagon. The stork, however, won the race and Mrs. Napior gave birth to a 7½ pound son in the speeding wagon.

"We'll name him Pat," decided Napior, "because he was born in a Paddy wagon."

Brazil is to establish price control, a priorities system and other economic measures to strengthen the war effort, the Department of Commerce says.

"DEATHLESS DEER"

By ALICIA PATTERSON and NEYSA McMEIN

Start it next Monday!

3,000 years ago Princess Deer, beautiful, imperious, dangerous, occupied the throne of the Egyptian kings. Her word was law, her wealth boundless, her beauty drove men mad.

Among her enemies, one thirsted for her treasure. To save her life, the high priest gave her a potion—which caused her to sleep for 3,000 years.

And then she awoke—in the modern world . . . and is off to a life of romance, love, adventure.

Colonial Women's Memos

Highlighting the Colonial Women's League matches at the Central Recreation alleys Wednesday night were two nifty marks collected by Charlotte Lapine of the Mayor's All Stars. Charlotte breezed in with a "heavy" 218 single and finished her night's activities with a 578 series. Her very efficient kegling paced the Stars to three straight wins over the Zeroettes who collected just that in the three-game match. Charlotte's 578 established a new high.

Cys illuminated the Central alleys with the new uniforms of yellow and blue. Watch Monday's Freeman for the photo of this club. Incidentally, some of Alyce Risley's friends might prompt her to tell just why our photographer had to snap the picture twice before getting an acceptable one for publication. It's reliably reported that Alyce has already received some questions on the incident. . . The new outfits of Cy's seemed to have struck the fuse for this gang never stopped until they had captured both high single and series, 832 and 2385. Helen Smart rolled a neat 186 and Captain Risley added 181, 183 and 162 for a 526 cluster. Bea Coddington furnished a 472 while Ethel Wetzel chimed in with her first 500 of the year. Tillie Clearwater's comeback continued. How about a 200 single, Til?. . . .Kaplans certainly has a spare queen in Bertha Schaller who rolled a nice 464 series. Reta Frederick had a 192 single and a 487 series. Ten strikes, oh, boy, how would that look in one game? Wishing Reta? Captain Helen Broskie complied her strategy to add another 190. This team then continued in the rampage until they captured high single 843 from Cys. Nice going, gals. Keep it up. . . .Sams made their appearance in new green and white uniforms, looking very chick. Late shift, so no news. . . .Chez Emile still on the beam, wins two from Kaplans. Rose Mary Weigand continues her edge on splits, making the 6-10. Vi Buboltz was on the alleys in spirit only. She had seven misses, two splits, one spare for a grand total of 87. Could it be the Army, Mr. Jones?. . . .Captain Winters rolled a 185 and Mary Van Alstyne converted the 4-9 split. . .Nekos, one of the up and coming teams, gave Cys a good tug of war. Marge Mellert does plenty of tricky stuff with her ball. Dot Gross was high with a 448. Cay Brennan certainly can call her shots. Let us in on it, Cay. She had the 8-6, 6-8, 10-4 and 4-9. . . .Joneses, minus little "Eva" (California here I come) Jones, rolled some nice scores. Rose Schatzel had 519 (160-167-192). Up and at 'em, Rose. Evelyn Provenzano just missed the 500 mark by four pins. What's four pins, Ev? Kay Robertson has been running into the nine's of late. Never mind, Kay, those spares look good even if you do have some tough breaks in not getting your deserved strikes. . . . Feye's bowlers sure are pounding the maples. J. Lowery had 168, Mary Marabell 209, one min off high single. Mary Manfro has perfected the corner pins. They give a lot of bowlers plenty of troublle at times. . . .More next week.

"Y" American League

Roland Post, president of the Y. M. C. A. Mercantile Bowling League, continued his great bowling last night at the "Y" alleys in the American League when he blasted out a hefty 534 series and 193 single. Both were high marks in the matches last night.

Post's great bowling sparked the Freeman No. 1 team to two victories over the "Y" couples. Besides the 1943, Post cracked out a 188 and 153. Shultis and Bill DeWitt were high for the losers with 440.

Another pacer in the matches last night was Jordan of the Electrols who posted a 192 and 510 triple. His other marks were 152 and 166. Jordan sparked the Electrols to two triumphs over Ballantines. Low had a high 470 series for the losers.

Wolfersteig of Wonderly's punched out a 497 triple on scores of 161, 169 and 167, as that team took two games from the Pontiacs. Dunham of the losers registered high single in the match with his 190. Emil Boessneck posted high series for the club with his 446.

Electrol League Results

Tony Casciaro and Mike Provenzano highlighted the Electrol League bowling matches at the Central Recreation alleys last night. Casciaro, bowling with the Maintenance team, carved himself a sensational 255 single game while Provenzano blasted a 577 series. Provenzano bowls with the Test Lab.

Casciaro, who has been picking up quite a few acceptable scores of late, continued his fine kegling last night with that 255 single game and a three-game cluster of 564 as the Maintenence team won three games from the Office representatives. Casciaro's other scores were 162 and 147. Stevenson had a 511 triples for the winners Simmons' 468 was high for the losers.

Meanwhile, Provenzano's high-powered triple of 577 on scores of 190, 182 and 205, sparked the Test Lab to three straight over the Automatics. Neer had a 195 single and 499 series for the losing club.

The Dispatch keglers took two from the Turrets as J. Murphy poured out a 193 single and 494 triple to pace the winners. M. Mann had a 491. W. Robinson's 466 triple was tops for the turrets.

In the final match the Accounters captured two decisions from the Apprentices. R. Clark's 179 single game and 499 triple paced the winners. Bob Vincent hit 215 for the losers and wound-up with a 499.

Robinson Winner Over Dellicurti; Jannazzo Is Next

Robbie's Streak Runs to 38 Straight as Professional; 10,349 Fans Witness Bout

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Having come out of his second invasion of the middleweight division with an easy victory over Vic Dellicurti, welterweight Ray Robinson agreed today to two more fights this year—one in his own class and one in 160-pound competition.

The first of these will be December 1, a return match against Izzy Jannazzo of Brooklyn, who is recognized in Maryland as the world welterweight champion. It will be a part of the annual Cleveland Christmas Fund boxing show. Robinson outpointed Jannazzo recently in Philadelphia.

The other will be in Philadelphia, December 14, probably against Jose Basora, a sharp punching Puerto Rican middleweight.

Robinson ran his winning streak to 127 fights, the last 38 as a professional, last night when he took a one-sided decision from Dellicurti, a fellow New Yorker, before 10,349 customers at Madison Square Garden.

The Harlem hammer, who weighed 144½ to Dellicurti's 153¾, punched his opponent around the ring in the early rounds and coasted the rest of the way.

Recreations List Players For 1942-43 Cage Season; Seven Will Be Retained

Pro Club Opens Campaign November 18 Here; Gershon May Be Signed

With only 11 days remaining before Manager "Turk" Karam brings his present edition of the 1942-43 Kingston Recreation basketball team to the municipal auditorium to open another professional court campaign, the local pilot is busy talking over details with his expected Kingston starters while watching a group of veteran cagers drill in New York city.

At the present time the Recreations plan to open the new basketball season at the Broadway boards Wednesday night, November 18. One of the top-flight metropolitan teams may be the opponent for the Recs in the opening tussle. Karam, with negotiations under way with the Philadelphia Sphas, may bring that American League club here for the Thanksgiving night game.

10 Players Under Eye

Manager Karam, who bossed the local team last year for a spell after Jim McNally's reign, and who has appeared at the municipal stadium twice with the Brooklyn Dodger Rookies, has about 10 prospective players under his guidance at this writing. The squad was scheduled to play St. Francis last night in New York.

Karam, in communications with the Recreation basketball committee here, announces that he has Nick Shaback, a big favorite here last season; "Porky" Rosen, Hagen Anderson, another 1941-42 star; Jack McGuirk, last year's center and forward; Ace Goldstein, Howie Bollerman, Irv Terjesen, former New York University high scorer; Jim Naughton, Sammy Kaplan and Herb Gershon. Gershon was last year's American League top scorer and his presence should prove to Kingston fans that this year's Recs will be an offensive more than a defensive team.

Favorites May Return

With the announcement that Shaback, Anderson, McGuirk and Kaplan may be with the Recs again this year, local fans are assured of seeing some of the cagers who helped the Recs to get back in the professional limelight again as a pro town. When Anderson was released last year after that big "house-cleaning" local fans were sorry to see him go as he always played one of the hardest games a pro cager ever played on the local boards.

Naughton, a newcomer to these parts, formerly played with the great Ohrbachs. Gershon, while competing with the Recreations this year, if he is finally selected, will divide his duties here and with the Grumman Bombers of Long Island.

By the time the opening game is slated for the auditorium a week from this coming Wednesday, Manager Karam will have trimmed the squad down to seven players. The starting line-up for the Recs and the probable opponent for the first game, may be announced some time next week.

Reserve Seats

The Recreation management has announced that all reserved ticket holders of last year will be given the first consideration of retaining them for the coming year. Reservations must be completed by Monday, November 16, two days before the first 1942-43 pro basketball clash.

Packers and Rams Give Gridiron Fans Warning

Poor Defensive Clubs Are Expected to Fill Air With Passes; Bears Oppose Dodgers

By SID FEDER

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—This is just a friendly tip to the good citizens of Cleveland to "head for the hills, men," when the Greenbay Packers parade against the Cleveland Rams on tomorrow's National Professional Football League program.

This is not to suggest that the boys will try any rough stuff on the cash customers during the proceedings, but the respective defensive records of the ponderous Packers and the rambunctious Rams indicate that the air's going to be full of footballs and the gladiators are going to be doing more point-making than point-stopping when these two outfits say "howdy."

For on the basis of gold figures so far through the campaign, it appears these two clubs have about as much idea of defense as a couple of Tony Galento's.

The Cleveland-Green Bay fuss may not headline the league's full weekly card, but it should uncork a good portion of the fire crackers, especially if the Packers' 55 points in their game last week is any indication.

Cards vs. Redskins

As for the "championship" aspects of the program, the chief feature appears to be whether Jimmy Conzelman's Chicago Cardinals, can interrupt the Washington Redskins' rhumba toward the Eastern Division title.

The unbeaten Chicago Bears who've been running wild over the western half up to now, shouldn't have any too much trouble in Brooklyn against the Dodgers, and the rest of the schedule—which finds Pitsburgh at Detroit and New York at Philadelphia—is about a dime-a-dozen on the open market.

But, when the Packers and the Rams turn loose, anything is likely to happen. Except for Detroit and Philadelphia—who are so far behind in their respective sections that they look like they're traveling in a second section of the train—these two teams show the worst defensive records in the league. Each has had 123 points scored against it, more than any other outfit except for Detroit and Philly. The Rams have been hit for 2,353 yards in eight games.

Rose Bowl Possibilities Are Named; Georgia Is Mentioned With U.C.L.A.

St. Mary's Pre-Flights and Washington State Also May Be West Coast Selection

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP)—Last week, before the 1943 Rose Bowl football game seemed a certainty, Los Angeles sports writers were pounding out rhapsodies on their word pianos about Georgia's Frankie Sinkwich and what a natural a Georgia-U. C. L. A. post season game would be.

Now that the Army is willing to sanction the Pasadena game New Year's Day, Georgia's Bulldogs and the University of California at Los Angeles Bruins still are the "people's choice" here, but by November 28 Georgia Tech's engineers might be the standout southern team and U. C. L. A. just another ball club.

If transportation problems can be overcome the Pacific coast conference representative would like to pluck the outstanding college team out of the usual post-season scramble among the various bowl managements, but if there is going to be any difficulty in getting the team of its choice here there is a service eleven close by that would provide all the competition, probably more, than the Coast Conference winner could handle.

St. Mary's pre-flights from the hills of Moraga, Calif., have a galaxy of gridiron greats with marked western drawing power, among them such all-America performers as Stanford's Frankie Albert and Bobby Grayson, California's Vic Bottari, Northwestern's Fred Vanzo and others. The flying cadets pasted an 18-7 beating on U. C. L. A. early in the season, figure they could do it again, and the Uclans are just as certain they could reverse the score. That game would pack the 90,000-capacity Rose Bowl.

U. C. L. A. still must prove it is the standout team on the Pacific coast. Its games against Oregon this week and Washington, Nov. 21 should settle the issue, and right after the Washington game the Bruins, if they are still undefeated in Conference play, are going to get the wires busy and try to entice a standout opponent here before the Orange and Sugar Bowls beat them to the punch. Time—the lateness of the football season here—always has been against the coast champions. It will be December 12 before the Bruins finish their schedule against the University of Southern California.

If U. C. L. A. stubs its toe anywhere along the line Washington State's Cougars look like the Pacific titleholder. Coach Babe Hollingbery's team has lost only one game and doesn't have to meet U. C. L. A., but the Cougars would have to get by their traditional rival, the University of Washington, November 28.

Hassett Decides Navy

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Bridegroom Buddy Hassett, who landed the first base job with the New York Yankees last season after nine years with various other baseball teams, probably will change uniforms again before another season rolls around. Hassett has notified the Yanks that he intends to join the Navy.

Tokle in Army

Camp Robinson, Calif., Nov. 7 (AP)—The best ski jumper of them all soon will be a member of Uncle Sam's snow troops. Torger Tokle, the Norwegian world's champion who started skiing at the age of three, is a private. He will join the ski troops as soon as he completes his basic training.

Bus Hearing Before Public Service Monday

"We are going before the state public service commission Monday," said Alderman Victor Roth of the Twelfth ward, this morning when questioned as to what further steps had been taken to inaugurate a proposed extension of the present bus route through the Forsyth Park area.

Alderman Roth said that he expected to attend the hearing in Albany Monday and that the city would also be represented by Corporation Counsel Joseph H. Forman. The bus line is expected to be represented by Thomas Gadd and Attorney John M. Cashin.

Alderman Roth some time ago introduced a petition signed by many residents of the Twelfth ward asking that the council approve of the extension of bus service in that ward.

The bus committee of the council held a public hearing and later at a council session the aldermen approved the petition which was filed with the public service commission by Corporation Counsel Forman.

At the last hearing before the state board the bus line was given a certain length of time to inaugurate the service, which time has expired.

Delightful Program at Rondout Presbyterian

Friday evening an entertainment of mirth, music and magic was presented by the young folks of the Rondout Presbyterian Sunday school at a party held in the chapel of the church. Following the program games were played and refreshments served.

The program, with Fred L. Van Deusen, well known local magician, as master of ceremonies, opened with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner and the pledge of allegiance to the flag led by Henry Peyer and Donald Wolff.

The Doherty trio, composed of the Rev. D. L. Doherty, pastor of the church, and his two daughters, Betty and Anna Jean, rendered violin and piano selections, and were followed by Bernice Lowe in a tap dance.

Miss Anna A. Van Deusen gave a pleasing piano solo. which was followed by Phyllis Wolff, Mary Bennett, Audrey Peck, Addie Krom, Ruth Stokes and Alberta Stokes and Gladys Karoe.

Norma Munos also rendered a piano selection, and a sketch was presented by James McClenahan, Joseph Banks and Kenneth Lowe.

The program closed with several magical illusions by Mr. Van Deusen.

Red Anniversary Brings World to Due Appreciation

rule by the German conqueror would mean. Russia dropped out of the war. The second front of that day had collapsed. In the spring of 1918 the Kaiser and Hindenburg, "because of the absence of a second front in Europe"—to borrow the phrase Stalin applied to 1942—almost won the war.

What a difference in the 25-year-old Soviet Russia of 1942! In Stalin's speech and in his order of the day there is assurance repeated many times that Russia, now bearing the brunt, is in the war against "that cannibal Hitler" to the end. If there is a note of reproach in the long passage on the absence of a second front, if there is the implication that Rommel's defeat is not enough—the aside remark that only 15 Axis divisions are contained in Egypt as against 240 in Russia—there is the steadfastness and power of the "Anglo-Soviet-American coalition" and in victory.

Not only will there be a second front, says Stalin, because the Allies know that without it things "may end badly for all freedom loving peoples," but "the day is not far off when the enemy will feel the force of new blows of the Red army."

Stalin Realized Contrast

The contrast between 1917 and 1942 must have been vivid in Stalin's mind as he spoke, although he referred to those ten days that shook the world a quarter century ago merely in a passing phrase. Few men alive can be so conscious of the difference. He alone of the revolutionary titans survives. Lenin is enshrined in Moscow. Trotsky's ashes rest in faraway Mexico, which saw the tragic end in exile of his stormy career. Kamenev, Rykov, Zinoviev and Bucharin all have been "purged." Other political leaders of present day Russia were lesser figures in 1917. Today's military heroes, Timoshenko, Zhukov and the others, were virtually unknown.

There are some parallels between the state of World War in 1917 and today. Then as now German armies held sway across nearly the entire breadth of Europe. The war was in its fourth year and the rapid approach of the climax was apparent to all. The tremendous military and productive potential of the United States was just beginning to be felt. But France was still valiantly in the field, Japan and Italy were in the Allied camp, although the former was a lukewarm and troublesome comrade and Italy was proving unable to stand alone, as she is today.

Two mighty facts offset those points of difference today. One is the fact that the United States already has mobilized more power in men and weapons than we had ready even at the end in 1918 and that the American war machine has just begun to roll. The other is that Russia, instead of abandoning the second front as in 1917, is holding the first front while her allies prepare for the second, holding it with a heroism that President Roosevelt hails as incomparable.

Floyd Weeks Is Given $50 Fine

Prospect Street Resident Pleads Guilty as Drunken Driver

Floyd Weeks, 57, of 75 Prospect street, pleaded guilty to a charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated when arraigned before Judge Daniel Hoffman in police court today, and was fined $50 and his operator's license revoked.

Weeks was arrested at 9:20 o'clock Friday evening on Cornell street by Officer Archie Van Aken after Weeks had backed his automobile into the parked car of Marion Mowle of Creek Locks. The Mowle car was damaged badly, according to the police report.

Arthur Burris, a negro of 115 Abeel street, charged with disorderly conduct last night, was given a suspended sentence, and Elting Hasbrouck of New Paltz, charged with public intoxication was fined $3.

Supreme Court Convenes Monday

Grand and Trial Jury Both in Attendance This Term

The November trial term of Supreme Court will be convened Monday morning at 11 o'clock when jurors will be examined and those presenting legal excuses, excused for the term. There is both ance at this term. At 2 o'clock a grand and trial jury in attendthe day calendar will be taken up.

At the September term of Supreme court held by Justice Harry E. Schirick there were but two cases which were actually tried and went to the jury. Thirty-nine cases in all, were disposed of by means of settlements or adjustments during the term, thus removing from the calendar an exceptionally large number of cases. Eighteen were stricken off the calendar for various reasons and six were discontinued. The large number of actions disposed of at the last term with but two cases actually tried and submitted to the jury, probably stands as a record in the history of the Supreme court in this county.

How to cut the cost of Heating Your Home

BY John Barclay

AMERICA'S HOME HEATING EXPERT

Automatic Operation of Dampers By Means of a Thermostat

It is a simple matter to automatically control your heating plant by installing a thermostat. A thermostat will automatically operate the dampers in such a way to supply even, steady heat upstairs between firing periods. It eliminates constant trips to the cellar for the manual regulation of dampers.

A good thermostat may be purchased today at small cost. In fact, in a short period of time it will pay for itself by saving fuel that was previously wasted by over-heating of the house. Authorities claim that for every degree above 70 that we heat our home, 1½% more fuel is consumed. If we heat our home up to 78 degrees, 12% more coal is used. If the automatic operation of the thermostat is governed by changes in room temperature it will stop this overheating and thereby save on coal consumption.

Medical men tell us that during the winter 50% of illness is caused by colds. They further state that overheating is one of the greatest causes of colds.

It will pay you to get more information on thermostatic damper controls. Your home will be evenly heated at all times without constant trips to the cellar and you will save on your coal bill. (6).

Flynn Is Confident Of His Release

Photographer Says Flynn Told of 'Shakedown'

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP)—Errol Flynn, voicing confidence in his ultimate complete vindication, today finds himself facing trial November 23 on charges of the statutory rape of two minor girls as his newest film opened last night at two major theatres here and in Hollywood, and on the whole received a good reception by critics and public.

The dashing actor was soberfaced, almost grim yesterday when he heard himself bound over to superior court on charges of violating Peggy La Rue Satterlee, Hollywood singer and dancer on a yacht cruise when she was 15, and Betty Hansen, 17, formerly of Lincoln, Neb., at a party in a fashionable Bel-Air residence. Under California law a sex act with a minor girl is statutory rape, whether or not is is forcible.

After the court, following his preliminary hearing, ordered him held for trial, Flynn said he felt sure of his vindication.

"The district attorney has had the ball so far," he said in a statement. "When I get it the picture will change . . . I have complete confidence in the essential fair-mindedness of the America majority."

Flynn did not take the stand during the hearing, his attorney, Jerry Giesler, noted specialist in criminal law, confining himself to searching cross-examination of the two girls. The actor remains at liberty under $1,000 bond.

As the hearing neared a close, the mention of an alleged shakedown against the actor was injected into the testimony when Peter Stackpole, amagazine photographer, took the stand. He took pictures on the cruise in August, 1941, when Miss Satterlee asserts she was attacked.

Questioned about a meeting with the actor after the voyage, Stackpole said:

"I believe Flynn said he was involved in what he termed a shakedown. I didn't question him. He simply said he was getting involved in a shakedown which involved Miss Satterlee."

Stackpole said he believed the amount involved was $5,000.

Flynn's picture which opened last night is "Gentleman Jim," based on the life of James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion. The morning papers reviewed the film without reference to the case. One critic said he played the role of Corbett "with real sincerity" and another commented that he was "suitable to the delineation in a majority of respects, which makes his performance acceptable."
